Mrs. America Meets the Peace

There's more good rationing news for Mrs. America. Point values of all types of cheese have been reduced to zero. This means the housewife can use the red points she formerly spent for cheese to purchase meat and butter. The reduction in point values was possible because cheese manufacturers are no longer required to set aside a certain percentage of cheddar cheese for government use to fill military and other needs. The restrictions on manufacture of foreign-type cheese to increase production of cheddar cheese have also been terminated.

War-time controls are being dropped as quickly as conditions permit. But the Office of Price Administration is keeping a watchful eye on prices to prevent any increase in the cost of living. It will be many months before supplies of most peace-time goods equal the huge pent-up demand. During that time, price ceilings will be maintained on cost-of-living items where necessary to prevent a drastic increase in prices. Mrs. America must do her part in this battle against inflation by paying no more than ceiling prices.

Clothing is one of the biggest items in the cost-of-living. To better protect Mrs. America's pocketbook when she is shopping for the family wardrobe, OPA is extending its pre-ticketing plan to cover a wider range of mens', women's, and children's rayon and wool clothing. Most cotton clothing is already under the provision. Pre-ticketing means that the manufacturer must attach a tag to each garment stating the ceiling price in dollars and cents. This enables the consumer to check the ceiling price easily.

The housewife who likes to treat her family and guests to unusual and exotic cuisine will be interested to know that several kinds of little-used foods are being removed from price control. Included in the list are such fish delicacies as canned caviar, frog legs, imported canned snails and smoked sturgeon. Among the fruits and vegetables items are canned artichokes, canned and frozen bamboo sprouts and bean sprouts, brined and canned cauliflower, canned and frozen corn on the cob, imported canned mushrooms, canned mushroom sauce, brined peppers, imported canned pickled onions, canned water chestnuts, and brined watermelon. The removal of these minor food items which do not figure in the cost of living from price control will enable OPA to devote more time to the really big job of firmly controlling prices of food items which play a big part in everyone's living cost.

Here are a few facts about food supplies. Pepper will continue scarce until we know the condition of stocks in the Far East, the source of 98 percent of our normal supply. None has been imported from the Dutch East Indies or British Malaya since 1942. There will be more canned fish for civilians this year than we've had since 1942. Reduced military requirements make the increase possible. A bumper crop of almonds will provide housewives with plentiful supplies of this nut. Walnuts and pecans won't come on the market until later in the fall.

Better quality of half soles are or soon will be available at the repair shops. A new material called neolite is now coming on the market, as are brown composition rubber and fiber soles similar to types sold before the war, except made of synthetic instead of natural rubber. Shoe repair shops are permitted to charge five to fifteen cents a pair over their regular prices for soles of shoes with these two types of materials because of higher costs.

TIRES

Use mileage rationing record in making applications.

PRICE CONTROL

Pay no more than ceiling prices to help prevent inflation.

RENT CONTROL

In Federal rent control areas, all rented dwellings must be registered.

Red Cross Peps Up Hi-way First Aid

Washington, D. C.—Plans for stepping up its highway first aid program were announced last week by the American Red Cross.

Calling attention to the "sharp increase in traffic injuries and fatalities since termination of gasoline rationing", which he termed a "foretaste of what we may expect with full resumption of peacetime motor vehicle travel," Red Cross Chairman Basil O'Connor predicted a greater need for highway first aid than before the war.

"Fortunately," he said, "the nation-wide network of Red Cross highway first aid stations has been maintained to a remarkable extent throughout the war years," while the vast fleet of first aid mobile units, manned by Red Cross first-aiders and equipped with approved first-aid materials, are in continuous operation and "will serve as the basis for an immediate and rapidly expanding program, reaching out especially into rural areas where prompt medical care is frequently not available."

MGM's New Program To Be Educational

NEW YORK (IPS)—The most comprehensive program yet tried in the field of 16 millimeter film production and distribution will be launched in the near future by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Announcement of the plan by Arthur M. Loew, president of Loew's International Corporation, stated that the program called for making of all types of educational subjects for classrooms and training use, along with 16 millimeter replicas of all the program photo-plays released annually to movie theatres around the globe.

The school and documentary films to be sponsored by MGM will be produced in association with specialists in modern visual education, and will embrace such study fields as geography, chemistry, physics and history. The United States government and officials of many other governments have expressed great interest in the widespread use of films of this type.

MGM releases in 16 millimeter of the company's own regular Hollywood productions will bring the latest stars and screen entertainment to isolated communities or in towns too small to support a regular theatre. In distribution of these films mobile projector units will be utilized, similar to those which have accompanied our service men in their travels to far-flung battlefronts.

It is primarily because of the lessons derived from use of motion pictures in the present war, Mr. Loew explained, that the new production plan has been developed. The film executive stressed his feeling that the far greater use of 16 millimeter pictures would not in any way curtail 25 millimeter production, but would merely amplify it.

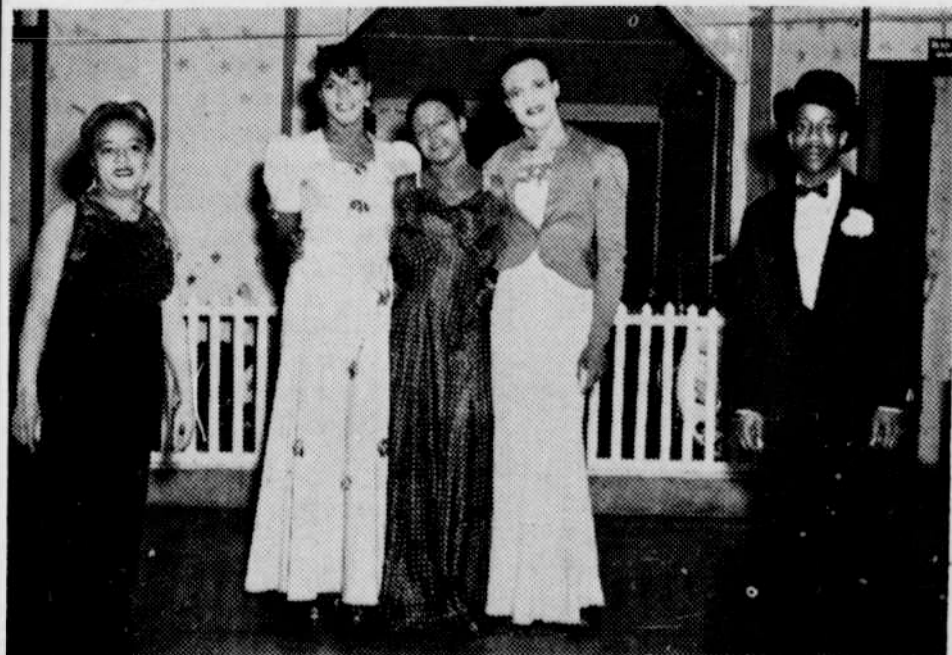

where prompt medical care is frequently not available."

Mr. O'Connor lists the number of highway first-aid stations now in operation as 2,177; as compared with a prewar total of 2,885. The number of mobile units, he said, has jumped from a prewar total of 3,959 to a present total of 10,742.

The highway stations, he explained, are established in cooperation with the operators of gasoline service stations, highway stores and restaurants, tourist inns and various organizations; including small town and rural fire departments. At least two first aid trained individuals, he said, are available at these stations at all hours of the day and night, and the locations are clearly marked by highway signs bearing the Red Cross emblem and the designation "Emergency First Aid."
