

ALL WORTH.

It is said that every man has his double. This generally occurs in youth, during the green-apple season.

It is hard to believe when a sleepy boy leaves his bed in the morning that he will hate to return to it at night.

Congressman Burrows thinks there will be an extra session of congress. Also that Idaho and Wyoming will be admitted into the Union.

Old Muggins (who has married a young beauty and has not yet tired of boasting about it)—Did you ever see my wife, Buggins?

Young Buggins—Lord, yes! I'm engaged to her—when you die.

First Boy—Do you think your folks will be willing to have your sister marry Mr. Comeoften, Johnny?

Second Boy—Oh, yes; I know they will. Pa keeps old Tiger tied up every night now.—Time.

"Look at that beautiful rosebud with a lot of old bugs swarming around her," remarked Brown, as several old boys were flirting with a young lady at a ball.

"Yes, but those are gold bugs, so the rosebud don't mind it," said Jones.

It is said on good authority that no profanity is ever heard in President Harrison's cabinet. The fellows who don't get offices do all the swearing, so the members of the cabinet have no cause to "cuss."

Photographer—Everything is now ready. Please smile.

Kentuckian—Thank you. Don't care if I do.—Arcola Record.

Mrs. Du Ile—John, my dress-maker arrived to-day, and I must have the materials to-morrow.

Visitor—Your pastor seems to be a very earnest man. His voice trembled with emotion when he read the lessons this morning.

Soprano—Oh, it wasn't that; he had just had a row with the choir leader, and he was mad clear through.—Puck.

One hundred and seventy thousand immigrants arrived in the U. S. during the first six months of this year. This is enough to make a good sized new state, and about double the number Oregon had on her admission into the union.

Cora—They say that gentleman from Kentucky won his wife at a game of cards. How romantic, wasn't it? Merritt—Yes. You see he was playing with her first husband. He detected the fellow cheating and shot him dead on the spot.—N. Y. Sun.

Red Hoss Dick—I'm goin' boys. Jes have a plain inscription on my monument, will ye?

Rocky Bill—Anything besides yer name, Dick, old pard?

Red Hoss Dick—Wall, ye mout put a cross with "his mark" on ter it. I can't write, ye know.—America.

Miss McFlimsey—They tell me that you are quite a musician, Mr. Bigorders.

Mr. Bigorders (commercial traveler)—Yes, I do a little that way.

Miss McFlimsey—What is your favorite instrument?

Mr. Bigorders—Well, I'm pretty good as a drummer, and I'm something of a "cellist, too.—America.

Miss Inference (languidly)—Do you know what the mosquitos are saying, Mr. Staylate?

Mr. Staylate—No, but it seems to be only "hum, hum, hum."

Miss Inference (disappointed)—Oh, I was mistaken, then. I thought it was "go-hum, go-hum, go hum."

He said good-night.

Sam Johnson happened to pay a visit to the county jail a few days ago, and whom should he see inside of the bars but Gabe Snodgrass.

"How in de worl', Gabe, did yer git in dar?" asked Sam.

"I doan bolder my head 'bout dat ar, how I got in heah. How to git out ob heah is what I wants ter talk about.—Texas Siftings.

Miss Cynthia Mushroom—Now papa, do be careful at dinner and don't mortify us before Mr. Stuyvesant Sturtevant.

Mrs. M.—Yes, Phineas; do mind your manners and remember all them little points in that book about etiquette that I've been readin' to you.

Mr. M.—Well, that's all right. You kin go ahead and arrange the things to suit yourselves, but I'm darned if I eat pie with a fork for anybody.—Truth.

Four Hundredth Anniversary of the Discovery of America.

(N. Y. Tribune.)

In three years we shall reach the four hundredth anniversary of an event which has been called the greatest in human history—the discovery of America by Columbus. By the common consent of mankind, this anniversary is regarded with extraordinary interest. The Spanish government began preparations long ago for holding in that country a great exhibition representing the arts and industries of Spanish America. By any plan which omits from its scope the greatest of American republics and disregards the marvelous development of the English-speaking race on this hemisphere will be grotesquely incomplete. It is obvious also that such an exhibition as would properly illustrate the story of America during these four centuries of magic growth should be held on American soil, and no more proper place could be selected for it than Washington. This is the seat of our national government, from which all the republics of Central and South America have drawn their inspiration, and there would be a peculiar fitness in inviting the nations of earth to that spot to see with their own eyes the stately structure of free government the world has ever beheld.

It was proposed to celebrate this anniversary first by a world's exposition, and afterward by a permanent exposition of the three Americas. The house committee on foreign affairs, wisely we think, rejected the idea of a world's exhibition under the auspices of the forty-six states and territories, and the sixteen independent nations of the American continent. * * * * *

To carry out this plan a national board of promotion, composed of the governors of most of the states and territories, the mayors of the leading cities, and of which ex-Governor Claflin of Massachusetts, is president, has been formed to take the exhibition in charge.

The proposed exhibition, it will be seen, is something very different from the ordinary world's fair. It would be expected not only to make a scientific presentation of the progress of this continent in civilization, but exercise a powerful and lasting influence in preserving its antiquities and historical records. Major Powell, of the geological surveys, favors it in the strongest terms on the ground that it would enable us to preserve countless relics of the seventy-five distinct Indian races which once inhabited North America—memorials which are fast disappearing every year before the rising flood of civilization. A special feature proposed is a building containing working models of great American inventions. The exhibition would be free to all the people.

Washington is peculiarly well fitted to be the site of such a permanent exposition. Unlike most large cities, it not only has room to spare, but the establishment of such an exhibition would add to the attractiveness and increase the prosperity of the city. There is a park of 300 acres in the heart of the city, stretching from the Capitol to the Washington monument. To this 700 acres are now being added by the reclamation of the Patomac flats, making a total of 1000 acres. The Smithsonian institute and National museum, which would be practically parts of such an exposition as is proposed, already stand within this area, and the great department buildings, which would attract and interest the visitor from abroad who was studying American institutions, are not far distant.

The Lasting Grief of Widows. A young Tipperary widow, Nellie McPhee, was courted and actually had an offer from Tooley O'Share on her way to her husband's funeral.

"She accepted," of course," said Grossman. "No, she didn't," said Smith. "Tooley, dear," says she "yer too late. Four weeks ago it was I shook hands wid Pat Swaney upon it that I would have him a decent time after poor McPhee was under board."

"Well," said Grossman, "widows of all nations are much alike. There was a Dutchwoman whose husband, Diedrich von Pronk, died and left her inconsolable. He was buried on Copp's Hill. Folks said that grief would kill that widow. She had a large figure of wood carved that looked very like her late husband, and constantly kept it up stairs for several months. In about half a year she became interested in a young shoemaker, who took the length of her foot and finally married her. He had visited the widow not more than a fortnight, when the servants told her they were out of kindling stuff, and asked what would be done. After a pause the widow replied in a quiet way: 'Maype it ish well enough to split up old von Pronk, vot ish oopstairs.'

Running By Soda. "Georgy, dear," she said in her most insinuating tones, as they were passing a soda stand with a tempting array of colored syrups, "did you read in the morning paper about the newly invented locomotive made to run by soda?"

"No, I didn't," replied George, turning pale at the hint, "but I am a good deal like that locomotive, Susie."

"How so?"

"Made to run by soda," and he did, because, you see, he hadn't the price of two sodas about his clothes.

Mr. Du Ile—Eh? What? You said you had written to her not to come until next month.

Mrs. Du Ile—Yes, I did; but she never got the letter.

Mr. Du Ile (clasping his hand to his breast pocket)—Woman! This is a plot—a vile plot! If you had really wanted her to stay away you would have handed that letter to the postman yourself; you wouldn't have given it to me to mail.—N. Y. Weekly.
