TO DEVELOP THE COUNTRY.

It is to the interest of every citizen of Crook county that the natural resources of the country be developed; that her latent wealth contained in her natural resources be brought to the notice of persons in search of homes and places for investment, and that what the country has to offer be so shown up that people from abroad can see them. Crook county offers almost inestimable advantages for investments of every kind and class. The farmer can find rich soil to till; the stockman unbounded pastures; the miner unprospected veins of mineral; the manufacturer an unoccupied field, where water power is running to waste and raw material awaits his taking—every industry can find an opening for investment. But how are we to bring these resources to the knowledge of those who want to invest? Some will remark that it is the duty of the local press, which is no doubt true, but the local press cannot be expected to do all this unaided. It must have assistance from other sources than its own resources. Others besides the local press must lend their assistance and proffer substantial influence before much can be done to develop our resources and build up the country. The people generally must unite to encourage immigrants to locate in the country, and they should also encourage any and all enterprises that have a tendency to advance the country's welfare. Some who are just a little selfish in their views say we have enough people here already, and if there are any good investments let us get hold of them before outside capital is invited to come in; while others of the same type will say we need more farmers and men who work only with their hands, but should not throw open our doors to speculators, for they may come in and make money. This is indeed narrow minded. We want all classes to come, and especially men of means, who are seeking speculation, for if they enter into any kind of pursuits here and make money we will all be benefited thereby. We repeat, Crook county wants more people of every class, people who will take hold and help develop the country, and they should and would receive encouragement, whatever their occupation, so as it is legitimate.

Hon. Geo. L. Woods, ex-governor of Oregon, died at St. Vincent's hospital in Portland on Tuesday of last week. Governor Woods came to Oregon in 1844, and grew up in the western wilds as one of this state's brightest pioneers. He was admitted to practice law in 1858, and from that time on mixed more or less with public affairs, winning for himself the title of "silver tongued orator." in 1866 he was elected governor of Oregon, and at the close of his term of office, in 1871, was appointed governor of Utah territory by President Grant, which office he filled, for four years. Governor Woods made some mistakes during his official career in this state for which he will ever be held responsible, but that he was a brilliant and remarkable man even his bitterest enemies must concede.

The Washington legislature has certainly established a reputation. About all the members of that body have done this winter is to pass appropriation bills and wrangle over the question of whether or not they should hire a chaplain to pray for them. Before the body adjourns the state may expect to be in the same condition as the Dakotas—bankrupt at birth.

Governor Pennoyer has appointed Hon. Morton D. Clifford, of Canyon City, circuit judge of the 6th district, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Judge Ison. Mr. Clifford is a bright young man, but it would seem that in the district could have been found an attorney of more experience and one better fitted for the position.

Empress Augusta, dowager empress of Germany, died at Berlin on the 8th. The old empress was dearly loved by the German people and her death is deeply mourned.

La Grippe is creating a sad record in New York City, the death rate exceeding that of any former winter.

HERMANN ON IRRIGATION

Representative Hermann is not very hopeful regarding the reclaiming of the arid lands of the West by irrigation, or of receiving aid from the government for this purpose. In a recent interview at Washington he said:

I am afraid that all this investigation and agitation by the special committee of the senate during the past summer will result in nothing material in the way of irrigating our arid plains. I can only hope to see an appropriation made, for the present at least, providing for a general survey of all lands which is believed should be irrigated at the expense of the government. There is too much opposition from the Eastern and Central states to warrant us in hoping we can get an appropriation through congress to prepare irrigating basins or bore artesian wells, although any fair minded man will acknowledge this should be done. The government has a right to irrigate its own lands. We have very little agricultural land which the poor man can settle upon, and if we should irrigate the arid plains there would be a new field opened to the poor men who wanted to go West and take up a home at the expense of the government.

I am unalteraly opposed to the proposition to donate the lands to the states with the understanding they shall be made arable by irrigation. Whenever the federal government gives its lands to the states to be irrigated it turns all of such lands into the hands of monopolists. The states have not the money to irrigate these lands and they would give them to irrigating companies who would be as grasping and fraudulent as such corporations have been in the past. I would prefer to depend upon changing elements or climate for irrigation than on irrigation companies.

I am thoroughly disheartened and believe that the whole project for the government to assist us in irrigating our arid plains will fall through. One thing is certain, we cannot get money for irrigation purposes until we have overcome the prejudices which abound east of the Mississippi river.

Newberg, the classic little Quaker city of Yamhill county, says the Statesman, has adopted a novel method of keeping that city clear of saloons. The citizens are generally opposed to the whisky traffic and to defeat the establishment of drinking places there, an incorporation has been formed with a capital stock of $20,000. This incorporation will vigorously prosecute the work for which it has been organized. The best people are among the incorporators.—Oregonian.

Judge William D. Kelly (better known as Pig Iron Kelly"), congressman from Pennsylvania died at Washington on the 9th. Judge Kelly was the oldest member, in point of service, in congress, having been a member constantly since 1860, and was often called the "Father of the House." He was an ardent supporter of protection, especially on iron, and was an able advocate of the causes he espoused.

Farmers' institutes are becoming popular in every section of the state. At a meeting held recently at Eugene, Professor John D. Letcher, of the Agricultural College, read a valuable paper on road making. The paper is well worth attention from Oregon's lawmakers, who may be called upon at the next session of the legislature to revise the road laws. The whole state is suffering from the lack of ordinarily good roads. The discussion of such practical questions will build up the Farmers' institute into the affections of the people.

The Ellensburg Register says snow on the mountain ranges and in the valley of the Columbia, is reported deeper than for many years past, and cattle are dying by the hundreds. The snow in the Big Bend is two feet deep, and on the mountains from three to six feet. About 3000 head of cattle are still on the range; the streams are frozen over; there is nothing for them to eat, and unless they are rounded up and driven out every one of them will die. The present season is one of the worst for years.

There are four senators from Montana knocking for admission to congress.

The natural craze has evidently reached Oregon in earnest, judging from the newspaper reports. A town that has not enough enthusiasm to get up a railroad scheme is now not worth mentioning. A Roseburg dispatch of a late date says:

"An enthusiastic meeting of citizens was held, crowding the courthouse. T. R. Sheridan, a leading citizen, was chosen chairman, with S. F. Flood as secretary. Speeches were made by Hon. A. C. Jones and others. A committee of four, to be appointed to act with the chairman to solicit stock and terms for the Roseburg & Coos Bay railroad was authorized; also to confer with the representatives of Coos county. A committee to organize a board of trade was also appointed. The leading citizens have taken hold in earnest, and the railroad to Coos bay will be commenced this year."

Salem, Albany, Astoria and Forest Grove are on the way to see their railroad schemes materialize. Eugene City is not asleep. Her citizens are preparing to build a railroad from tide-water on the Siuslaw through Eugene, thence over the mountains via McKenzie pass, and on east to nobody knows where. And thus it goes. It does seem as though Prineville is behind in this matter of substantial scheming, but perhaps not, if the whole truth were known.

The great ball of the "four hundred" of New York city came off at the Metropolitan Opera House on Thursday evening. It cost $15,000 and was gotten up by Ward McAlister. Only a few blocks away from the scene of these extravagant festivities little children were shivering from the lack of clothing and crying for the want of food while deserving grown people were suffering for the necessaries of life. So is it in all parts of the country.

The democrats of Ohio have made a mistake that ought to forever defeat them in future elections by choosing Calvin S. Brice as United States senator. Brice is a plutocrat of pronounced type and one who is opposed to the interests of the masses. Besides he is not a citizen of Ohio, but a resident of New York.

The two Dakotas are said to be almost bankrupt, and no visible means of meeting the expenses incurred by their first legislatures without going beyond the debt limit provided by their constitutions.
