Mrs. Nation, the saloon-wrecker, comes from Kansas, the home of 'Rockless' Jerry Simpson, Senator Pfeffer, with the whiskers, and other celebrities of the reform gang.

The Crook County Journal, published at Prineville, issued an excellent New Year's number. It is devoted to the history of the country, development and a portrayal of its resources and prospects.

The little town of Hardman has one of the most remarkable youths for his age, probably in Oregon, in little Walter Burgess. He is now nine years of age and has made a three-day run that will thrill three or four heads of wheat and clean it as readily as any threshing machine.

Railroad building in Oregon promises to be unusually active in the coming months, notwithstanding the great rainy combinations are the order of the day.

More than 1000 acres of Prineville, Lakewick and other lands in Eastern Oregon, are being stretched a line entirely across the state north and south, with branches to tap important producing sections, like Lake County and the Upper John Day Valley.

It is claimed not to be a public speaker nor yet an educated man, but when a man comes to books but from his own personal observation and experience, he is a simple thing to tell his story.

In the year 1856, sometime in September, a proclamation was issued by the people of Oregon that a line of the Indians from the California line on the south to the parallel of latitude on the north had been placed, and that the territory was to be divided into two equal parts.

Forty-five years of patient waiting has passed, and these veteran soldiers have never received one cent, (in many cases.) Some may have received a moiety of three audited allowances, but I, and many others I know, have never received anything.

How ungrateful the powers in congress have been, in refusing to render just assistance to these veterans will never be fully known, until some historian, with greater powers of eloquence than Clay, Webster or Patrick Henry shall rise up and electrify the people of congress as to their injustice and ingratitude.

ing, which they did not have appreciated, but furnished free, and without charge. I think every county in the state furnished a company each. I am speaking of what I know and will say that I enlisted in Marion county Co. F, under Capt. Penner, of Salem, and served with him until he was killed by the Indians, Dec. 7, 1855. We then elected First Lieutenant F. H. Jones, captain, and went into winter quarters. We lived in our canvas tents with the thermometer from zero to 30 degrees to 40 degrees below. Remained in Co. F until Mar. 1, 1856, at which time Marion county company was disbanded. I then took a transfer to Co. E, Captain Hembree, of Yamhill county, and he was killed and badly mutilated in Yakima valley in April, 1856. Lieut. Allen was then elected Captain and remained so until May, 1856, when we were mustered out of service at Portland, having got the best of the Indians in every battle.

We were never neglectful of placing guard every night we were in service, both surrounding camp and picket, and performing the duty when the cold was intense was anything but pleasant. We were often out of anything to eat, except horse meat straight, with out salt or pepper. Some would sit upon the shank end of the hind quarter of an Indian horse, while the upper fleshy end was placed in front of a roaring fire, and when nicely browned across the end, some one would cut a nice thin piece about a foot square or less, and retire and eat. Some would roast on coals, some would par boil, pour the water off and fry, some would stew, but all were well and hearty.

Some few would crank, for you know cranks are indigenous to all climates and all countries. These same cranks though who could not or would not eat horse meat, came out in the spring as sleek and fat as the balance of us—suppose they company had at least one crank, to hold us in check, and acted as a safety valve to a steam engine, to keep us from injuring ourselves in concealing and executing our practical jokes. We did not mope and squal, neither are we doing so now for we are only asking for what we consider our dues, of a country we consider the most just country on earth.

I do not need the government of being designedly unjust to us, but governments or the powers of government, are made up of individuals, but the world's fault is to see that the people, our antipodes, are properly educated and taken care of, which shows a very philanthropic spirit, even if a few old fogies of bygone days are destitute of money or means to render themselves passably comfortable. These old fogies did nothing but hold and accelerate the peopling of the best part of the American possessions, and there are but few of them left, and to economize on time, we had better just let them remain as superannuated soldiers in soldier's homes, at the state expense; or, if they prefer, place them on the counties as paupers, to be sparingly fed, sparingly clothed and sparingly buried, for in the face of the fact of the subjects of Great Britain in India, being in a starving condition, it behooves us to do the greatest good to the greatest number, and make our appropriations to that end. In my simplicity, I believe that charity should, in all cases, begin at home, and I also believe that passage of scripture that says, "The man that provides not for his own household is worse than a heathen." Who are the poor remnant of the Indian war veterans but members of the household of the United States? Then congress should lower its far seeing telescope and look with naked eye upon the suffering and destitute at home, and upon the poor, broken down veterans who risked their lives cheerfully, throwing themselves in the front of battle to quiet our title to this glorious land.

Forty-five years of patient waiting has passed, and these veteran soldiers have never received one cent, (in many cases.) Some may have received a moiety of three audited allowances, but I, and many others I know, have never received anything. We are all old men, from 65 to 75 years old, who were then in the heyday of youth and prime of life, but the greater number have attended the inevitable roll call and are lying down in peace in their lonely and unmarked graves.

How ungrateful the powers in congress have been, in refusing to render just assistance to these veterans will never be fully known, until some historian, with greater powers of eloquence than Clay, Webster or Patrick Henry shall rise up and electrify the people of congress as to their injustice and ingratitude.
