

At this season the housekeeper must look specially after the baking powder.

As she cannot make good cake with bad eggs, no more can she make cake that is light, delicious and dainty with inferior baking powder.

Royal Baking Powder is indispensable for the preparation of the finest food. It imparts that peculiar lightness, sweetness and flavor noticed in the finest cake, biscuit, doughnuts, crusts, etc., which expert bakers say is unobtainable by the use of any other leavening agent.

This wire is the lighest, and, relatively, the finest and strongest material known for the purpose. The unwinding of the wire under the pull of the kite is controlled perfectly and easily by a brake.

The instrument sent up with the kite to secure the automatic record of the aditions of the air is called a meteor ograph. It is a complicated and remarkable affair, and, withal, light, weighing only about twenty-one pounds. The sheet on which the record is produced is wound around the cylinder seen at the bottom of the figure. A clockwork inside the cylinder causes it to revolve at a slow and uniform rate of one revoution in twelve hours.

Four different meteorological condi-tions are recorded by the four pens of this instrument. The pen on the right traces a line on the paper which shows the bumidity of the air, the pen being actuated by a strand of human hairs stretched inside the long tube seen at the top of the figure. These hairs lengthen when subjected to moist air and shorten in dry air. The next pen toward the left traces a line upon the record sheet which shows the pressure of the air, the pen being actuated by the gang of five round, thin objects seen between the pressure and humidity pens in the fig-

The next pen traces a line showing he temperature of the air, which acts titled, "You Promised Me," to be si upon a special form of thermometer after marriage.

ANCIENT ENGLISH BRIDGES.

They Have Survived Time's Ravages and Remain Practically Intact. The old Bow bridge built by Queen Matilda at Stratford-atte-Bow in the twelfth century, survived till lately in a much-restored condition; the charge of it was given by its builder to a religlous house near by. It was a simple stone structure of three arches and was not only often in bad repair, but was used by its keepers to extort money from passengers.

From the frequency with which the prefix bridge occurs in the names of places one might imagine that many of our towns and villages have been named from their bridges, and such is in-deed often the case, but in many other Instances the prefix comes really from the name of St. Bride, or Bridget, one of the most popular of Celtic saints. At another Stratford, that situated on the Avon and destined to worldwide fame, there was in Leland's time a poor bridge of timber, so insecure that many poor folks and other refused to come to Stratford when Avon was up, or commynge thither, stood in jeopar-dye of lyfe." It remained for Sir Hugh of Clopton, once mayor of London, to erect the existing fine structure, which, says Leland "hath fourteen great arches of stone and a long causey made o stone, low-walled on each side, at the west end of the bridge." This was the bridge that Shakespeare knew and to glad to testify that it has greatly all intents and purposes it 's the bridge

"Why, this is nothing This is a southern spring zephyr com pared with what we used to get when I was a boy. We were living then over on the farm. Our house was set in a very exposed place on a small bill. When the March wind blew she rocked that house like a small skiff in a gale at sea. I slept then in a bed on rollers. Many a night in March I was awakened by the rolling of the bed all round the room. It would bang against all four walls, making such a noise that sleep was well nigh impossible." "What did you do then?" I ventured

"What could I do," said Dan, "but sleep on the floor and hang on to the bed to keep it from rolling. It was sleeping under difficulties, I'll admit, but then we didn't have many nights like that."-Albany Journal.
