The Ideal News paper.

You hear talk of the "ideal newspaper," like the flower that never withers, the bird that never alights the land where sunlight never shines, it only exists in the imagination and the sucker whom we are told to expect the sunshine. Writing from the midst of a great world, if you have ever been in his shoes, you know he is thenecessary part of the romance, the one which he has ever dismissed. He must publish a paper close to the pulpit, whether anything happens or not. His judicial mind must be for respect to the dictum, judge, and give him printers in instructing the jury. He must discourse with equal facility upon the silver question and farmer Jones' Jersey red, skin painting and Portland-China pigs, power washing and the penetrance of names, formal and local, justified by truth and justification by type, the doctrine of election the election returns, the delays of the last year and the details of frightful sights. The mixture of church and school, the square in town council must be equally familiar to the verse and prose. With all this he must wait on the delinquent subscriber, discount the bill of the patent medicine, stand off his wish, always go well, extend, pay the printer on Saturday night whether a cent has come into or out, write few words, teach the city, never ask for any house but being willing to put up the same old name, to local people who owe him three years' subscription—so short, or all things to all men. The mistakes in dates, take his corrections of the community and never curse back. That is the hard task and his paper is a day. We never see an 'Em.

Senator John H. Mitchell lost suddenly on last Wednesday train for Eugene, in response to a call because news of his illness.

He expects to return to Oregon at the earliest possible moment. He has been very much regretted being compelled to leave at this time, as he expected to be present when the voters and bankers committee of the House reached Portland;

The Times-McCallister has reprinted the next democratic state Sherwood and there is now nothing for the democratic platform conventions to do but confirm the nominations, and nothing for the candidates to do but keep up the fire so usual for the soup room.

The ticket is an all hail, for governor, Geo. E. Chamberlin, of Portland; for secretary of state, George Isham, of Astoria; for state treasurer, W. E. Grant, of Baker City; for state printer, W. L. Ginter, of Portland; for superintendent of public instruction, John Garside. For treasurer, the folks say, zk. For general, W. W. Lyttle, of Attleboro.

RUGGERS.

Gowing to the fact that the Eastern Oregon Banking Co. of Eastern, Ont., is located at the center of the county, and being the largest and best stock marketing center in Oregon, it would seem only right and proper to have its home there. It is the center of the state, and the center of the state is the home of the bank.

In order to be able to accommodate the stock holder and to keep complete self service, we should appreciate very much to have them, not only at any time, a list of their stockholders, but altruists, and that they may or may not employ the use of the last line for that purpose. If at any time, they wish to obtain any information in regard to the market or to know who becomes the center of the state, to whom the banks are directed, a. a person addressed to the F. T. Harrinan, Cobbler, Mission, Oregon, to manage their property and will contain all the information and news at our command.

Price Paragraphs.

We are receiving occasional reports of very dry weather at present in this vicinity. Charles Shepherd passed through here recently with a band of horses bound for the valley. Mr. Shepherd says that he will make Webfoot his home in the future. Mr. Mason Logen has the satisfaction to lose one of his best saddles two hours from a broken back caused by being ridden too light.

The school is improving nicely under the management of Miss White. Mr. Hickman has completed his new home on the mountain.

Young men have a great idea fighting all night at the post office. How about it Polly! E. E. Hohle had a very narrow escape while breaking some brush. They run a cross a ditch causing the wagon to come un-coupled and breaking the coupling pole, losing Mr. Hohle ride off on the few wheels of the wagon from where he fell down behind the mule that were kicking and trying to get away. Several men at hand and the team was stepped without any serious accident except a few pretty burnt ears.
