

Talks with the Doctor.

Influenza, the grip, or la grippe as the French call it, is again upon us. It is classed as a zymotic disease of the greatest variance and peculiarities. The disease is now endemic, whether it will become epidemic or pandemic is yet to be seen and feared.

The disease usually sets in with an acute catarrhal fever and unusual prostration, but this mode of onset tho' common is not general for one may have the grip in its worse form and never have the slightest lesion of the respiratory tract. It is this that makes the disease so varied and of so many types.

After the great pandemic of influenza of 1839-'90 it was remarked that suicide was particularly common and some writers tried to show that such acts were really traceable to the great depression of spirit which in most cases accompany the disease and remains long after the patient is apparently well. How many people will say today that their ill-health dates back to the last epidemic of influenza and let me assure you that in many instances they are perfectly correct. There is scarcely any form of nervous disease that may not follow the grip; from a mere depression of spirit to complete dementia. Any organ in the body may become affected and make of the sufferer a cripple in health for life.

The reason influenza is so feared is not so much because each and every individual case is so serious, but rather because the number of those liable to the disease is so great. Hardly anyone is exempt and a previous attack gives no immunity against a new one. Influenza by itself is not so dreadful a disease, but its complications are what we most fear; consequently I would warn every one to regard the disease as serious; thus avoiding complications which often arise from exposure and lack of proper care of what one may think only to be a slight case of coryza or cold.

As the disease is so varied and its manifestations so complex; a routine treatment for all would be impossible; each case is or may become a disease altogether apart from a simple case of influenza. In all cases, however, rest in bed is to be recommended as well as a careful and nourishing diet. The indiscriminate use of alcoholic beverages is often most harmful to the patient at the beginning of the disease, but a warm bath followed by hot lemonade and a good sweat will often relieve the patient of a great deal of his suffering. Who Is Behind Contests.

EUGENE, April 25.—Many people who have located homestead claims would like to know more about the authority which has been instrumental in filing contests against a large number of claims in this county. H. H. Anderson, who is now cruising in the eastern part of the county, is reported to have made the statement that he is in the employ of the Land Department of the Government. He has been instrumental in many of the contests that have been filed, and from this it is inferred that the Land Department officials are making an investigation as to the filings that have been made on the homestead and timber-land claims. Many of the contests are made on the ground that the homestead laws have not been complied with, that continuous residence has not been maintained, improvements have not been made as required by law, etc. At first it was thought here that the contests were brought about by parties of capitalists from the East who were desirous of obtaining the lands by purchase or entry for the timber. Many believe here that Mr. Anderson, instead of representing the Government, is, as a matter of fact, in the employ of timber speculators. The action to be taken on the contests already filed will be watched with great interests by people here, about 200 or 300 of whom are directly interested. There is no doubt but that many of the homestead claims are covered with valuable timber, but in most cases the homestead claimants have endeavored to comply with the law, and there is strong hope that the ruling of the Department will be in their favor.

How The west Tested Roosevelt.

On Mr. Roosevelt's famous campaigning trip across the country in the fall of 1900 it became apparent that some of the plainsfolk were hardly satisfied that what they had heard of the candidate for Vice-President was not too good to be true. So there developed a unique system for the entertainment of the distinguished guest. He was mounted on the most spirited—and not always the most thoroughly broken—horse in the neighborhood, and was invited to go for a ride with a number of eminent citizens who wanted to "show him the country." Sooner or later in the course of the ride he would be decoyed to a stretch of open plain; the pace would be gradually increased until the ride became a wild breakneck race in which only the stouthearted and steadiest-headed rider could hold their own. Time and again did this occur, and no one was less disturbed by the practice than was Governor Roosevelt.—May Ladies' Home Journal.

A Raging, Roaring Flood.

Washed down a telegraph line which Chas. C. Ellis, of Lisbon, Ia., had to repair. "Standing waist deep in my water," he writes, "gave me a terrible cold and cough. It grew worse daily. Finally the best doctors in Oakland, Neb., Sioux City and Omaha said I had Consumption and could not live. Then I began using Dr. King's New Discovery and was wholly cured by six bottles."
