"Mercerized Silk."

Every woman is more or less familiar with "mercerized" fabrics, but comparatively few know why they bear that name or how the name originated. The cotton yarn with its silky lustre from which these goods are made was first produced by a Frenchman named Mercer. The process was discovered by him more than forty years ago, but it has only come into popular use within the last few years. Mercer discovered that by treating the cotton yarn to a bath of caustic soda and sulphur it would become translucent and elastic, and all impurities would be removed. After this treatment the yarn was stretched to prevent its shrinking, and afterward subjected to the usual process of dyeing or bleaching.

For some reason we notice that the women do not take as kindly to the work incident to the care of their homes as men do to the work of providing for their families. For instance there will be ten times as much kicking and jawing about washing the dishes and the like among a lot of girls as there will be among boys who have much dirtier work to do in caring for the stock on the farm or working in a shop. Men put more enthusiasm into their work, no matter if it be hard, drudging and in every way unpleasant, while so many good women seemingly resent the fate which compels them to perform the drudgery of the home. Why cannot women accept their limitations, and invest homemaking and house-keeping with the same enthusiasm that men put into their business? One reason is that so few girls are ever taught how to care for a home in a business-like and intelligent manner and so work all their lives at a disadvantage, doing work in the hardest way and ignoring a hundred economies and methods which would make their work easier and more pleasant. We will put it in this way—the average American girl is allowed too much liberty, is not sensibly and practically trained and is taught that the chief end of her existence is to secure some man who will take care of her and provide for her wants. Reform on these lines is needed not only for the sake of the woman herself, but for the sake of her husband and children.—Ex.

Guests Passed With Glaciers.

Hotel-keepers in the Alps have a new trouble and are complaining at the loss of patrons, who are moving away from the glaciers. Yes, the attractive glaciers are actually passing from the landscape, and as they recede the hotels along their borders find that their registers are shortening. These glaciers are not running away, by any means, but they are deteriorating slowly, with a persistency that means their final annihilation. Hotels that a few years ago stood very near to a great river of slowly moving ice now find themselves a considerable distance away, and the attractiveness of the site is lessened. The famous glacier of the Rhone has shrunk 3000 feet in the last 20 years, or about 110 feet a year. A number of the well-known glaciers approximate this diminution, and the scientific fact is established that these reminders of the great glacial period are surely disappearing.

The dental work of Dr. C. A. Cline is too well known in this country to need any praise. He can always be found at the old stand, next door to the First National Bank. Give him a call.
