Our Editor Abroad.

Boarding one of Mac Cornett's overland flyers on Saturday we were soon bowling along at a rapid rate bound for the metropolis. For some distance there has been no improvement made in the country since last year, but after gaining the foot of Grizzly we find that there has been several ranches taken up during the past year. After crossing the summit the stage goes flying down the hills at a rate that would have made Horace Greely catch his breath. A large amount of work is being done on the road from the foot of Grizzly for a distance of several miles. This is the part of the road where so much trouble is experienced during the winter months with the "doby" black mud. Considerable improvements could be made in the method of applying the gravel, but it is a vast improvement over the former conditions existing. Around Morrow & Keenan's ranches everything betwixt us and prosperity and the grass is in fine shape. At the B. S. & L. Co's. ranch on Hay creek they are cutting the first crop of hay, but we did not stop long enough to find out how it was yielding. It is a mixture of ches and alfalfa and will make good sheep feed. After many experiences, among which was the losing of one of the orange blocks of the stage and the editor going back to pick it up, we arrived at the Heiser station where we had dinner. From Heiser the road winds around in devious ways until it enters Front creek canyon where we found some of the finest farms we have ever had the privilege to look upon. On some of these farms they are raising large herds of healthy looking rabbits. We saw some thirty old in a space of less than half an acre.

This part of Crook county will no doubt become famous in time for fine fruit as it is well adapted to the culture of the more tender vegetables and fruit. Leaving Trout creek as it was becoming dusk we proceeded up the Antelope valley, or canyon, and for a distance of some miles it is very narrow and rugged, but opens out into a fine little valley of prosperous looking farms and dairy ranches. We reached the Antelope after it was too dark to see what kind of place it is, but from the bustle and stir we find under the impression that there is considerable business done at this point, here we were joined by Mr. Reed, of St. Paul, and several others. Nothing further of interest occurred until we arrived at Shaniko where we were greeted with the greetings of many farmers, including the manager of the notorious sheep business that are being harvested at that point. Shaniko is located on the top of a ridge that seems to be composed principally of stone and sand, but it has a fine hotel building and it is a pity that Prineville could not have one as good. Boarding the train, it
