Didn't Know Him.
The following from the Browns-ville, Times is too good to keep:
An old man, a republican deaf as a door nail, came to town on election day to vote. His eyesight was also defective, and one of the judges went with him into the booth to prepare his ballot for him.
When the question of voting on the initiative and referendum was reached the judge asked him how he wanted to vote on it. The old man only caught the last word and he yelled out in a voice that could have been heard in a saw mill, "Referendum! Who in h—l is he?"

After the Real Thing.
"There was another just such Panama hat craze about 15 years ago," said a Michigander as he removed his "genuine and fanned his heated brow, "and as I was going down to the Isthmus on business I determined to get a sample of the real thing. I had a friend in New York in the hat trade, and when I told him I'd wait and get my Panama from the hands of the weaver he laughed and turned away. He offered me something which you could roll up and put in your vest pocket almost, and which didn't seem to weigh an ounce, but I wasn't paying $50 for American imitations. I sailed away wearing a felt hat, and in due time reached Panama and started out to buy a hat. I found hat stores and Panama hats in plenty, but every hat had a suspicious look. That is, it looked as if made in Connecticut and shipped down there, and I afterward found out that such was the case. I finally appealed to an American in the railroad office there, and he replied:
"I'll send you to a place where you can get the real thing. In fact, you can see the braid woven and make sure you are not deceived."
"It was a journey of five miles out in the country," said the searcher, "but I went to the spot and found three or four women braid ing and sewing. There were a dozen finished hats, and I picked out my fit, paid 25 cts for it, and let my mule wear it home on its head. It was rough, stiff and almost shapeless, and made of grass as tough as cattails. It was Panama because made in Panama, and for no other reason, and I could have got a better one at a country store for the money. When I got home I called upon the hatter and asked if he had a good Panama for a reasonable figure, and he smiled and replied:
"Certainly I have. Just got a consignment from Danbury, Conn., last night. Here they are—from $1.50 to $75, and all you've got to do is to find your fit, pay your cash, and go away happy."
