C. L. SALOMON DEAD.

Victim of a Runaway Freight Team.

One of the saddest tasks that a newspaper has, is to chronicle the death of a good citizen of the community, in which it is published. But when that citizen is taken from the bosom of his family by a violent death, the task is doubly sad. On Sunday evening about five o'clock as C. L. Salomon was watering his freight team in Cow canyon on the road to Shaniko, one of his horses became frightened and ran, causing the others to run and as the bits had been taken out for the purpose of allowing the horses to drink, they could not have been controlled had anyone had hold of them. Mr. Salomon dashed across a small knoll after the team and was lost to view by those who witnessed the runaway. As soon as possible parties started after him and found him lying in the road and the team piled up about fifty yards further on with one horse dead and another one wounded. It seems there were but two men present and as soon as they conveyed Mr. Salomon to the house of John Haight, near by, one of them started to the telephone station and called up the doctor at Antelope. As soon as the doctor arrived, he found that it was a serious case and that he did not have the requisite instruments and at once sent for Dr. Belknap who left immediately for the scene of the accident.

The team consisted of six horses and after the first stop where it poked up and one horse was killed, another run was taken and the whole outfit went over a grade eight feet high, killing another horse and so severely wounding a third as to make it worthless. The wagon suffered no material injury, excepting the tops were broken off.

Upon Dr. Belknap arriving there it was found by examination that there was no possible hope for Mr. Salomon's survival, but it was thought that he could be brought home and made more comfortable than where he was, and if there was any possibility of saving him it could be done where the necessary appliances could be had. He survived the home coming, but a critical examination showed that the skull had been fractured very badly on the left side for over two inches, while all of the back part of the skull was a mass of mass pieces, and several large blood vessels had been broken. He died about 1:30 p. m., Tuesday. His family were present at the time of his death, except Anna, who was at Belknap Springs.

Mr. Salomon was one of the pioneer merchants of the town, and was a progressive and industrious man, and an honorable, upright citizen. The family has the sincere sympathy of the community in their bereavement.

The funeral services will be held at the Methodist Church, on Thursday, at 2 p. m., Rev. Ed Baker, a former pastor, will be present, to conduct the services.

Death of Mrs. I. W. Ward.

News was received here by telephone, that Mrs. I. W. Ward died in The Dalles about two o'clock, Tuesday afternoon. She was taken with a fainting spell and as soon as she recovered from it, was taken with another and continued in that way for some time, until she died. Mrs. Ward was well and favorably known in this county, and always took an active part in church work. We are informed that the remains will be brought here for interment.
