To Utilize Snow Water.

Investigations by the United States Geological Survey are now in progress in northern Wyoming with a view to extending the use of the available water supply in that portion of the state. Jeremiah Ahern, an engineer of the Geological Survey, is in charge of the work. Particular attention is directed to the eastern slope of the Bighorn Mountains, where important storage problems on the headwaters of the Sulphur, Powder and Tongue rivers await solution.

These streams, after leaving the mountains, flow through fertile bench and valley lands, which, with proper irrigation, would be valuable for agricultural development. The rainfall of the region is light during the time water is needed for irrigation, but the winter snows on the mountain slopes are usually heavy and furnish large quantities of water to the streams. The source of supply at present is an extremely unsatisfactory one, for the warm rains of spring melt the snow rapidly and produce disastrous floods, in which large quantities of water pass through the streams unused.

There are, however, a number of lakes in the region, favorably situated to be used for storage. One of these is Lake de Smet, whose water surface is said to be 30 feet below the lowest part of its rim. In this lake it is proposed to store part of the headwaters of the Powder river, thus saving a large body of water for irrigation which is now entirely wasted.

Mr. Ahern has been engaged during the present summer in gaging the flow of the streams on the eastern slope of the Bighorn Mountains and investigating the possibilities and probable cost of water storage in the region.

A Typical South African Store.

O. R. Larson, of Bay Villa, Sundaes River, Cape Colony, conducts a store typical of South Africa, at which can be purchased anything from the proverbial "needle to an anchor." This store is situated in a valley nine miles from the nearest railway station and about twenty-five miles from the nearest town. Mr. Larson says: "I am favored with the custom of farmers within a radius of thirty miles, to many of whom I have supplied Chamberlain's remedies. All testify to their value in a household where a doctor's advice is almost out of the question. Within one mile of my store the population is perhaps sixty. Of these, within the past twelve months, no less than fourteen have been absolutely cured by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. This must surely be a record." For sale by all druggists.
