HELP RANGE CONDITIONS

Bills to Come Before the Oregon Legislature This Winter

Two bills which, if passed, will have a vital bearing on the range situation in Grant county, are to be brought before the Oregon legislature this winter by a representative from Walla Walla county, says a Pendleton dispatch to the Oregonian. One will provide that sheep from one county, for either winter or summer range, must pay a certain tax per head to the latter county. This bill applies also to cattle. A second bill is to be modeled on an Idaho law. It provides that sheep may not be ranged within a mile of a farm settlement or homestead. The Idaho law makes provision for a two-mile limit.

If these two measures are passed and enforced, they will go far to alleviate the distressing conditions in Grant county which give rise to the numerous shooting affrays and the intense strained feeling between home and foreign stockmen. Then Morrow, Umatilla, Gilliam, Wasco, Crook and Washington state sheepmen, who bring in hundreds of thousands of sheep into Grant's summer range will be compelled to contribute to the maintenance of the county institutions and improvements, a change for which Grant residents have long been contending. It has been a source of peculiar bitterness among settlers of the John Day that they should be taxed to keep up the district, while foreigners came in early with their stock and got the bulk of the grass. Grant county sheepmen, in their turn, rarely drive abroad, and would be able to appreciate in their fullest the benefits of this bill, if passed.

Many a shooting affray would probably be prevented by the application and enforcement of the grazing bill, making a mile limit for sheep around every homestead. One of the chief causes of trouble for years has been trespass by outside sheepherders on private holdings. Settlers complain that outside sheep eat the grass to their very doors, and leave their little holdings bare and their own cattle starving. Stockmen here say the two measures are well designed to equalize the stock situation to some extent.—Grant County News.

in the water level; but with a change of wind, air is drawn in and the water is observed to sink. During the progress of a low barometer area over one of these regions wind is violently expelled from the wells with a noise distinctly audible several rods. Professors Loveland and Swezey of the University of Nebraska, have made observations on a well of this nature in Perkins county and found that its breathing periods were extensively coincident with the barometric changes.

The citizens of the region have attempted many explanations of the wells. Some have reasoned that the blowing is probably due to the liberation of the gas produced from petroleum, and that as petroleum is a natural distillation from great coal fields, there must be an abundant supply of the latter mineral beneath the surface. Fortunes have been staked upon this deduction and much time consumed in a fruitless search for coal. Others have noticed a change of current which some wells show every twelve hours, morning and evening, and have thought that this oscillation was due to a tidal action of the sheet water, erroneously considering the latter as a great subterranean lake. The phenomena are most frequently attributed by scientific observers to atmospheric pressure, which, though probably exerting great influence, is not necessarily the whole cause. The material through which the wells are driven may throw some light on their peculiarities. In southeastern Nebraska a layer of dense limestone about 4 inches thick lies beneath 50 to 100 feet of subsoil. Below the limestone is found water-bearing gravel. When the limestone covering the water-bearing beds is penetrated water under slight pressure rises about 1-foot. The water-bearing layer is very porous and must always contain more or less air. As the air above and the air enclosed in the gravels below are alike subject to the fluctuations of the barometer, it follows that if the surface air is rendered less dense the air below will pass out through the well opening until equilibrium between the rarer air and denser air is established, and the opposite effect will follow during a period of high pressure. Still, this explanation, plausible as it is, hardly accounts for the force with which the air is expelled from some of the wells, and a more comprehensive study of the problem is needed to satisfactorily explain all the phenomena.

Notice to Electric Customers.

Your attention is called to the monthly lighting rates, which will be found in the last part of Section 10, Ordinance-122, which reads as follows:

Evening until 10 p. m., .05 per candle power; evening until midnight, .06 per candle power. All night lights .08 per candle power. Residences, churches and halls special rates. Residences were given a .04 rate for this reason. They are supposed not to burn their lights only when in actual use, and in no case to burn lights all night in unoccupied rooms.

Beginning November 1st, 1902, we will charge an .08 rate on all night lights unless permission has been granted for same.

We positively will not furnish current to lights not purchased from P. L. & W. Co. Where this fraud is found to exist service will be discontinued without notice.
