Continued from 1st page. The cattlemen were quite enthusiastic about forming a local organization, but this interest has apparently faded away. The secretary intends to issue another call for the convention at later date, but is rather doubtful if an attendance of any size can be secured. Mr. Mays and R. N. Stanfield, of Pendleton, have been appointed by the executive committee to attend the meeting of the Livestock Association which will be held in Denver May 3. Whether the two delegates will represent a live or a defunct organization of cattlemen is at present problematical.

SWIMS JOHN DAY FOR $150

Indian Braves Swift Waters of the Stream to keep the Mail Box From Being Destroyed.

For a dollar and a half an Indian performed a deed of daring near here on Wednesday which most men could not be hired to do at any price. The feat which the red man undertook and successfully carried out was to swim the treacherous John Day River, now higher and swifter than for many years and filled with drift. It was at the old Gilliam ferry, where the Fossil-Waterman stage crosses the river. For several days it has not been deemed safe to run the ferry there or at other places on the river because of danger from the drifting logs, says the Telegram.

The mail has been sent back and forth in a box suspended from the ferry cable, but Wednesday morning, while the box was on the other side, the rope which is used to pull it across became caught in some drift and was broken, and the only means of transportation thereby stopped. But it was not for long, because sheep belts are hard to find in Wheeler county this Spring, and consequently a dollar looks big to a siwash. Probably because of this fact Marion Gilliam, the mail contractor, was enabled to secure the services of one for the remuneration mentioned at the start. The river is about 150 yards wide at that place and is very swift. But after taking off all clothing and tying a shirt on his head, the Indian plunged in and reached the opposite bank safely less than a quarter of an mile below. He then brought the box over along the cable hand over hand.

COMPANY ISSUES PAMPHLET Deschutes Irrigation Company Is Sending Out Illustrated Circular of Crook County.

The Deschutes Irrigation & Power Company has issued an illustrated booklet showing its segregated tract along the Deschutes and giving the terms by which settlers may acquire title to the desert selections. Scenes of alfalfa fields, stock and sheep flock and herds are shown, together with views of several ranches along Crooked river which have been converted from areas of waste land into fertile and productive regions. The pamphlet says in part: Stock raising is in its infancy, both in Oregon and Washington. The problem of winter feed for cattle and sheep is one that is pressing for solution. The public range is about gone. Both cattle and sheep on foot and dressed have appreciated steadily in cost during the past two or three years. Alfalfa is needed for winter feed and for fattening. Stockmen and sheepmen pay gladly from $7 to $20 per ton for alfalfa hay in the stack, according to the supply obtainable. In Washington and Oregon the minimum price for alfalfa, purchased by contract in the stack immediately after first cutting, has been from $6.50 to $7 per ton. The cost of raising, harvesting and stacking is under $2 per ton. Irrigated land with a well established crop of alfalfa will furnish a net income at the minimum of $30 per acre. Twenty acres in alfalfa under wise management, will yield a cash income sufficient to support a family.
