THE MORAL SIDE.

In seconding the efforts of our school authorities to make Prineville an educational center, the Journal has devoted much space to the growth and development of our schools. It is the purpose of the present article to show what is being done along moral lines for the benefit of our High School pupils. There is no question more puzzling nor is there one more important to parents than this one of moral development. Under the caption of "Discipline and Moral Training," the Crook County High School catalogue has this to say:

Although the school has rules which pupils are expected to obey and which are enforced, yet the infliction of punishment for their breach is of necessity not prescribed but left to the discretion of the faculty. There are cases where there are exculpatory circumstances which must be considered, others where the offense is deliberately committed. Necessarily no exact penalty can be fitted to the offense. While a severe penalty is best in one case, in another it would destroy the culprit's self-respect, shame and disgrace him and push him downward. Many young people pass through a period in their lives when they must be protected from themselves, must be taught to guard against acts growing out of their own weakness and impulses. Often they are at the critical period in life ruined by injudicious teachers and parents who forget that self-respect is a powerful motive which must be fostered, not destroyed, that public shame is never other than a step downward. This mistake we try to avoid, hence all meetings for discipline are secret, it being our belief that such matters concern only the culprit, his parents, and the faculty. We never fail to give him a chance to plead his cause and if innocent prove it, and we always, unless impossible, believe his story. If there is a doubt we never take action but give him the benefit. If it can be avoided we do not administer public punishment; yet there are a few such cases occur in every school and if the parent or pupil at such time thinks the punishment too severe we would welcome an appeal to the High School Board.

However our system of discipline is not a rigorous one. We believe rather in appealing to the pupil's sense of justice, in inspiring in him confidence that he will receive a "fair deal." Instead of threatening, we appeal to his self respect, to his manhood, to his honor; we endeavor to inspire in him loyalty and devotion to his school and a determination to stand by it. We want him to feel that the success of the institution rests to a great extent upon his shoulders and to place pride in its growth. We want him to feel deep interest in the bringing in of new students, in the faithful performance of all night duties, in honest work, in the good name of his school. These are things we teach, not only for the upbuilding of the school, because every pupil may some day be connected with other and greater institutions and the practice of these qualities will contribute to his advancement.

The bane of many schools is dishonesty. So far we have had little of it because our pupils as a whole are ashamed to practice it. "Confidence begets confidence" and mankind, young or old, generally will deceive neither those trusted nor those trusting. It is the untruthful and dishonest who meet personally with much dishonesty. Believing this to be true we trust our pupils, sometimes even when appearances are against them. We frankly admit to pupils that we cannot absolutely prevent dishonest work and directly place them upon their honor. We do not mean that we permit examinations to be written without supervision, a policy which is foolish and disliked by the student himself, but instead our motto is, "The maximum of confidence with the minimum of temptation."

Habits are formed only by repetition and habits of honesty, self-reliance, courage, justice, courtesy, and self respect, are formed only by the practice of these qualities. We depend upon our pupils to cultivate them and we teach them how they may do it. We aim to build up a school sentiment favorable to these virtues and condemnatory of those who fail in their practice. The average person cares more for public approval and hates more public condemnation than he does reward or punishment. If that is not the case he has lost self respect and the reformatory is the only place for him.

We endeavor ourselves to practice these qualities and consequently make the effort to be uniformly courteous, honest, and just in our dealings with pupils. We realize that we may receive as pupils those who will lapse from the practice of these virtues and thus tear down our good name, especially when they are new to the school. The students as a whole who are as much interested in the obeying of our rules as the faculty will welcome information from any one concerning such misdemeanors and in their condemnation of such conduct will contribute their share to the punishment inflicted by the faculty. We appeal to every reader to protect and build up our reputation as a school and if any student forgets that he should be a gentleman or a lady to report the matter to the faculty and not to "Dame Gossip."

We have just received from Prof. A. C. Strange the Annual Catalogue of the Crook County High School for which we extend our thanks. The school is well organized and doing good work. There are two four year courses of study, the Latin and the Scientific, and one three year course, the English. These courses of study are well arranged and meet in a high degree the needs of the students in this section of the country. The expenses are very light and the young people of the county should take advantage of the education offered Crook county should be proud of her High School and the people show their appreciation by sending their young people to this school instead of sending them to some outside institution of which they know but little as to its merits.—Laidlaw Chronicle.

The weather bulletin issued July 31 says: The week was dry except Saturday, when clouds formed and in a number of places thunderstorms occurred, with very light rain. In the coast counties the nights and mornings were generally cloudy or foggy and the afternoons clear. East of the Cascade Mountains and in southern Oregon the sunshine was excessive. The temperatures averaged above normal, with the coolest weather during the closing days of the week. In the Willamette valley the warmest day was Friday, when the maximum temperature was above 90 degrees. In southern Oregon, Tuesday and Friday were both hot days, with maximum temperatures above 90 degrees, but the remaining days were only moderately warm. East of the Cascade Mountains temperatures of 90 degrees or more were common during the first five days, after which lower temperatures prevailed.

Just a Line from Upper Soda.

James Elkins, treasurer of Linn county, who spent a few days with the campers at Upper Soda, writes to Charles M. Elkins, his son, as follows:

I am greatly enjoying my visit with the Prineville colony. Among the people from Crook county are Dr. Rosenberg and wife, Justice Luekey, Mrs. Thomson, Mrs. Fuller, Mrs. C. M. Elkins and son, Mr. Hamilton and wife, and others. The women folks could not forego looking for berries and yesterday drove up to the top of Seven-mile mountain and after a diligent search returned with their buckets about half full. Today there was another trip made entirely by the ladies with a determination to do better. Quite a demand was made for all the surplus overalls not in use in the camp so as to be better able to get through the brush and over the logs. The women returned at night with about the same success they had yesterday. They have put up at our camp nine or ten jars each of blackberries.

P. S.—Keep mum about the overalls.

The Redmond Fair.

Redmond is preparing for a fair in the early fall. It will be held September 20, 21 and 22. E. C. Park, the secretary, was in Prineville Friday and was quite enthusiastic over the subject. He says that approximately $1000 will be offered in premiums and purses. All kinds of athletic sports are promised from tugs-of-war to novelty races. Grounds have been secured south of town which will be cleaned up and made ready for the opening.

Of course primarily the object of the fair is to exploit the resources of Redmond and vicinity. To show to visitors what can be produced and incidentally to learn from each other the best methods of reaching certain results. There is no better school for such a purpose. Exhibits, however, are open to the whole of Crook county and anyone contemplating entering should communicate with the secretary. The officers in charge are: W. A. Kendall, president; E. C. Park, secretary; C. W. Ebiel, treasurer; H. F. Jones and F. L. Ricker, directors.
