

GEORGE KNARR KILLED YESTERDAY Had His Head Crushed In Coming Down Cow Canyon— Died Instantly.

George Knarr, a freighter of Bend, was killed yesterday in coming down Cow Canyon, two miles the other side of Cross Keys. Details of the accident are meager but it was learned that his brake gave way and in trying to bank his wagon he was thrown out in such a way that his head was crushed in. Mr. Knarr was 41 years of age and leaves a wife and two children.

Judge Frazier Holding Court.

Judge Frazer of Portland is in Prineville, presiding over the district court in the absence of Judge Bradshaw. The judge is well known throughout Oregon, on account of his efforts in behalf of wayward youths. For the past two years he has been in charge of the juvenile court in Portland, and with the help of his able assistants has met with signal success. This court is not a criminal court but was established as a protection for the children under its care; rarely ever does it have to resort to severity. When a child appears in court charged with a petty crime, he is generally dismissed on probation and must report once a week or oftener as the court sees fit. A record of each child is kept on file by the clerk and his doings are carefully watched by probation officers specially appointed by the juvenile court. Within the last year a truant officer has been added to the corps of assistants. It is Judge Frazier's opinion that if a boy is to be kept out of mischief he must be kept busy and provided with good wholesome amusement. With this thought in mind he organized among juvenile court boys, a number of baseball teams and with the assistance of prominent business men, equipped them with all necessaries. This summer over a hundred of these children and their officers enjoyed a pleasant outing.

Everybody is working overtime at the court house. Monday and Tuesday were given up to civil cases. On Wednesday the first criminal case was heard. William Hogg and James Adams were tried on the charge of stealing a calf. The case was given to the jury just before supper and a few minutes afterwards sent in word they were ready to report. They were not heard until after supper when they handed in a verdict of guilty as charged. Hogg and Adams are being tried on another charge today—that of horse stealing. A jury had not been secured as we go to press.

Fitzgerald, who is charged with being an accomplice of Adams and Hogg, demanded a separate hearing. His case will probably be heard tomorrow.

The case against Dell, charged with the murder of William Pugh, will be heard this week, so also will the case of Dawson, who is charged with assault with a deadly weapon upon the person of A. Add Keller of The Dalles.

The state vs. Fred Shepherd, charged with the murder of B. F. Zell, has been set for next Monday.

Last evening Oliver Errickson who lives on Bear creek, was arraigned before Judge Frazer on a charge of stealing a horse belonging to William S. Gibson. He was given until tomorrow to secure an attorney and plead. His bail was fixed at $1500, in default of which he was taken in charge by the sheriff.

NOTICE OF MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Crook County Cattleman's Association will be held at Prineville on Saturday, October 13, 1906, at 10 a. m. All members of the Association are requested to be present. E. T. SLAYTON, Vice-President.

A Fair Story.

The Crook County Fair illustrates the old adage that "he who laughs last laughs best." The pioneers who settled along the water courses of Crook county located there because of the unlimited range through the spring and fall on the "arid" desert land covering three-fourths of the entire county, and the splendid summer range on the Cascade and Blue mountains, never dreaming that the day would come when the desert would be covered with the fescues of settlers foolish enough to believe that anything (except sagebrush and bunchgrass) would grow there.

For forty years the pioneers' dream was undisturbed, but the evolution of new methods and new ideas of farming, born from many disastrous failures through lack of rain when needed, led progressive farmers to believe that as a business proposition it was better to put water on crops when needed than to depend upon the uncertainties and eccentricities of the clouds. The tide of emigration which for three hundred years has rolled ceaselessly westward, will, through the passage of the national irrigation law and the "Carey Act," make of Oregon one of the most populous and wealthy states of the Union. Is it not time for the pioneers of Crook county to wake up?

Two years ago when it was noised around Prineville that a few settlers had taken up land on the "desert" under the Carey act, we pitied them for their lack of judgment and laughed at the thought of anyone trying to raise a paying crop among the junipers. About two months ago we felt a mild jar when we received the advertisements of a fair to be held at the one-year-old town of Redmond on the "desert." The story of that fair has already been told. The surprise of those who visited it. The amazement at what had been accomplished in so short a space of time by these wide-awake, progressive and prosperous looking farmers who have moved to Crook county from the New England states on the East and the Willamette valley on the West. After again seeing the exhibits of the Redmond country at the Crook county fair just closed, we do not blame them for exchanging the comforts of the old home for the inconveniences and hard work necessary in carving out a home in a new settlement. But Crook county offered them an inexhaustible rich soil wherever water can be had to irrigate it; more water than can be diverted for the purpose of irrigation than in any other county in any state in the "arid" belt. Crook county also offers them the finest climate summer and winter, year in and year out on the face of the globe. Cool nights and sunny days, with the inspiring views of perpetually snow-clad mountains; add to this dense pine forests where deer and other game are found in abundance; with lakes and streams abounding in speckled beauties, what more could mortal desire?

According to careful estimates made by Labor Commissioner O. P. Hoff, the population of Oregon for 1906 is estimated at 504,649. Assuming that the commissioner's figures are approximately correct, Crook county has nearly doubled in population since the census of 1900. The census of that year showed a population of 3964. The census for 1905 showed 4713. Population based on school children for 1904 was 5045. Population based on school census for 1906 was 8440. Population based on school enrollment for 1906 was 6594. Population based on school attendance for 1906 was 7201. Taking an average of census, enrollment and attendance for 1906 gives Crook county a population of 7412. Not a bad showing.

A dispatch says that it is understood that the President has finally made up his mind to withdraw all coal lands not already taken up of the country under the land laws of the United States. The expectation is that he will, by a special message, request Congress to change the statutes, but that meanwhile he will himself temporarily withdraw the coal lands from further entry.

Wounds, Bruises And Burns.

By applying an antiseptic dressing to wounds, bruises, burns and like injuries before inflammation sets in, they may be healed without maturation and in about one third the time required by the old treatment. This is the greatest discovery and triumph of modern surgery. Chamberlain's Pain Balm acts on this same principle. It is an antiseptic and when applied to such injuries, causes them to heal very quickly. It also allays the pain and soreness and prevents any danger of blood poisoning. Keep a bottle of Pain Balm in your home and it will save you time and money, not to mention the inconvenience and suffering such injuries entail. For sale by D. P. Adamson & Co.
