GREAT CHANGES.

Carpenters and Mechanics Invade the Eilers Piano House and Begin to Do Things.

(From Portland Journal, Nov. 10.)

Instead of the sound of the piano, the noise of the hammer and saw are the predominating factors at present at the store of the Eilers Piano House, on the busy music corner of Washington and Park streets.

Possession has at last been secured by the firm of the upper floor and the additional space which is to be added to the firm's quarters, and the work of remodeling the building is being rushed forward as fast as possible. The long delay which the house experienced in securing occupancy of the upper floor is a matter of which the public is aware, and has been a subject of deep concern to the Eilers company, who have been at their wit's end to know how to handle the immense business of the past few months.

A reporter who made the rounds of the new quarters yesterday found Mr. S. J. McCormick, the genial vice-president and manager of the firm, busily engaged in directing a dozen things in as many minutes, here, there, and everywhere, but with all his overtaxed time, he took long enough to show the newspaper man through the maze of pianos, carpenters and general confusion.

Said Mr. McCormick, "This is the worst imaginable mess for a music store to go through with, but the battle will be worth the struggle, for when we complete these extensive changes which are now under way, we shall have the finest music house in this part of the country. We shall have in addition to our first and basement floors, a space on the second floor equal to a full quarter block. We shall have a fine broad stairway leading from Park street to our second floor, upon which will be located our main salesroom, embracing 2,500 square feet of floor space, our organ department with an additional 1,000 square feet, a spacious pianola department, publicity department, and a number of well adapted studios. Our main salesroom will be splendidly lighted and well ventilated, and our pianola department will be the finest of its kind probably on the coast; this room will have sound proof walls, and will be arranged in every particular to best meet the demands of the purposes for which it will be used. There will be convenient elevator service, bringing the second floor within easy access, and this second floor will be removed to a considerable degree from the noise and confusion of the street, which will be much appreciated by those who are engaged especially in the selection of pianos.

"We shall continue to maintain our first floor, our receiving, shipping, repair and tuning departments, as well as our Phonograph Department, which is growing to unusual proportions.

"Business has been phenomenal during the past few weeks, and is a sign that the city of Portland and the entire north Pacific coast section is in most prosperous condition—perhaps more so than even in its previous history. We have been sending pianos in carload shipments to our branch houses, with rapidly-increasing frequency, and still the call comes from our outside representatives for 'more pianos.' Our local sales have been especially gratifying, too, and everything indicates a wonderful fall and winter trade."
