King of All Cough Medicines.

Mr. E. G. Case, a mail carrier of Canton Center, Conn., who has been in the U. S. Service for about sixteen years, says: "We have tried many cough medicines for croup, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is king of all and one to be relied upon every time. We also find it the best remedy for coughs and colds, giving certain results and leaving no bad after effects." For sale by D. P. Adamson & Co.

"PINAFORE"

The Great Comic Opera Given by Local Talent December 21-22.

Sullivan's great opera "Pinafore" which is to be given in Club Hall in this city, Friday and Saturday nights, Dec. 21st and 22d, by local talent, for the benefit of the Crook County High School, was written before England had reached her present unequalled rank as a naval power. In fact at the time it is probable that our own navy was considerably superior in strength and efficiency, although as all know England has always needed a greater naval power than we owing to her insular position and scattered possessions. This inefficiency was due to the prevailing system of appointment of naval officers. At that time England's leading admirals and other officers of the Admiralty were men of wealth, rank or family. Although many were excellent seamen, the majority were incapable. The English people knew this thoroughly and gave the great opera a welcome such as no opera had ever had before.

The amiral of the British fleet of which the "Pinafore" is a ship, Sir Joseph Porter, is an officer of this type. He is a middle aged bachelor who owes his cabinet position to what is popularly called a "pull." In the opening act the "Pinafore" is in Portsmouth harbor awaiting inspection of the admiral. The scene opens with a chorus by the sailors, followed by the visit of Buttercup, the bumboat woman, with trinkets for sale to the sailors. Ralph then tells in one of the finest solos of the opera of his hopeless passion for Josephine, the daughter of the captain, which is followed by a solo by Captain Corcoran. Josephine, then, the stage being vacated, sings of her secret devotion to a common sailor and her shame at loving below her rank. Sir Joseph then comes on ship where he asks permission of the captain to pay court to his daughter, which is granted. Ralph, despondent over this turn of affairs, attempts suicide and Josephine in her agitation avows her love and thus puts an end to his purpose. They plan to steal ashore by night and be married and are aided in the plot by the sailors and female relatives of Sir Joseph, who accompany him wherever he goes. Dick Deadeye, however, the villain of the story, secretly jealous of Ralph, plans to reveal to the captain the plot. The second act opens with a plaintive solo by the captain, in which he bewails the misfortunes which have befallen him and following this he is warned by Buttercup of a coming change in his life. Sir Joseph tells of his unsuccessful suit and is urged to try again by the captain. He then gives Josephine advice which fixes her resolution to marry Ralph. In a series of duets and solos which follow, Deadeye reveals to the captain the plot. Then comes the attempt to elope which is frustrated by the captain. This is followed by a solo by Buttercup in which she reveals the fact that Ralph and the captain had been exchanged when infants and that Ralph is really the captain and of high degree. This makes the marriage more welcome which is at once arranged. Sir Joseph in his sorrow is soothed by Hebe who promptly appropriates both his heart and his hand. The captain long in love with Buttercup plights his vows with her and thus endeth the story.

There is much that is laughably ridiculous in the play but all should remember that it is a burlesque and as has been said before intended to ridicule away a system which was rendering inefficient the British naval service, which it was instrumental in accomplishing. There are many beautiful songs which all should bear. New scenery has been painted for the occasion and an expert has been engaged to arrange the stage settings. As a consequence, the opera should be a great success. The cast of characters will be found elsewhere in this issue. The evening will appeal to all, to the music lover because of the melody, to the story lover for the story, to him who wishes to do good because of the purpose, and to the student for its historical interest. It you belong to one or all of these classes, as no doubt you do, unless you are deaf and blind, you cannot afford to be absent. We cordially invite you to be present on one or both nights and assure you that if you come the second night also you will enjoy it better than you did the first.

THE CITY ELECTION

The People's Ticket Elected—A Quiet and Orderly Day.

The city election Monday was a quiet and orderly affair. Two tickets were in the field, a Peoples' ticket, headed by Med Vanderpool for mayor, and a Citizens' ticket, headed by T. H. Lafollette. The entire Peoples' ticket was elected. J. L. McCulloch, for treasurer, was on both tickets.

The vote was fairly representative of the city, although fifty or more could be named who did not respond to the call of civic duty. A total of 198 votes was cast this year and 178 for 1905. Last year the contest for marshal brought out a full vote but this year as both tickets contained representative citizens there were a good many stay-at-homes. The following is the vote:

PEOPLES' TICKET.
For Mayor,	Med Vanderpool.....117
For Councilmen,	J. H. Rosenberg.....105
	I. W. Ward.....121

Bad Time to Ship Cattle.

The Portland Oregonian says that cattle shippers in the country seem to be laboring under the mistaken idea that the only time to sell their stock in this market is at Christmas. For several days they have been rushing in their cattle in a way that has completely demoralized the market. It would not be so bad if the stock was good, but the larger proportion was made up of lightweight and half-fat steers and common cows. The result is that the market is glutted with stock that it is almost impossible to move at any price. Shipments before the holidays are always large, but no such rush of cattle as has occurred the last few days was ever before known in this market. Had the stuff come in earlier it might have been moved, but now there is practically no demand for it. The market for sheep holds its own.

Gatewood Mining & Trading Company OF HOWARD, CROOK COUNTY, OREGON

Capitalization 500,000 Shares. Treasury Stock 100,000, Par Value Non Assessable.

Subscription Price $1.00 per Share. Paying from the grass roots down.

The property consists of 33 claims in the South-eastern part of Crook county, on the head waters of the Ochoco river. There is an abundance of water for power purposes and some of the best timber in the county is located on these claims. The economic conditions for mining could not be better.

The mines are now on a paying basis, but with additional machinery they can be made a big dividend payer as the output can be doubled with very little additional cost of labor. In order to install this machinery the management has decided to issue 10,000 shares of Treasury Stock. This stock will in all probabilities be the last offered for sale. It will be sold at $1.00 per share. There is no deviating from this price. That the stock will increase in value is a certainty. You can find no better place to invest your money. If you desire to get in on this you will have to do so at once, as this stock was put on the market in order to give the residents of the county a chance to realize something from an investment in one of their own properties.

This is not a speculation at all but a sound business investment based upon ascertained facts. The mine has been developed beyond the experimental stage. About the best recommendation we can give these mines is that the men employed by the company are investing their savings in the purchase of this stock. Also such men as Clark, Daly, Fair, Haggin, and a host of others have made their money from mines and the development of them.
