FAIR ASSOCIATION MEETING

The stockholders of the Central Oregon Livestock & Agricultural Association met in Prineville Monday to elect directors and transact other business that might properly come before the meeting. The following directors were elected for the ensuing year: T. H. Lafollett, Champ Smith and G. Springer. The following officers of the association were chosen: T. H. Lafollett, president; Champ Smith, vice-president; M. R. Biggs, secretary; G. Springer, treasurer.

The stockholders were much pleased with the reports of the fair officials and with the progress made last year. The association is virtually out of debt and plans were formulated to make the 1907 fair the best ever held in Central Oregon. With the burden of indebtedness removed that has hung over the association in the past the hands of the officials are left free to offer premiums and hang up racing purses that will stimulate and encourage our livestock men and farmers to do their utmost. An effort is being made to place the association in the regular state circuit, which, if successful, will add $1000 to the agricultural premiums.

The new pavilion that was built last year will be doubled in capacity this year. The grand stand will be covered and otherwise improved. The race track is to be improved and other conveniences made for the comfort of the public.

An order was spread upon the minutes granting the baseball boys the privilege of using the fair grounds when not in use by the association. Baseball games and tournaments will hereafter be held at that place where the accommodations will be ample to meet all requirements.

Grazing Fees Will be Collected On Reserves.

A recent decision of a Federal judge has been widely commented upon throughout the West on the supposition that it declared illegal the regulation of grazing on forest reserves and the system of charging for grazing permits. As a matter of fact, the decision, which was handed down by Judge Whitson, of the United States District Court for eastern Washington, in the case of the United States vs. Matthews, has no bearing whatever upon the legality of the grazing regulations or of grazing fees, which stand precisely as before. The legal question involved was simply this: Does the law authorizing the Secretary of Agriculture to issue regulations make the breach of those regulations a crime?

Judge Whitson's decision merely answered this question "No." It was in substance that the objection to the indictment against Walter Matthews was the absence of a law defining the act therein charged as a criminal offense. Upon that ground the court held that the demurrer must be sustained and the defendant discharged.

Though the point was simple and clear enough, it was entirely misconstrued in the press reports of the decision and in editorial comments upon it. For instance, in the Wyoming Tribune of Tuesday, November 6, news of Judge Whitson's action was given under the headlines: "Grazing Fees Illegal Decides Federal Judge," and the article declares that "As a result of the decision, Matthews, who entered the Mount Rainier Forest Reserve without the permit required by the Secretary, is still using the reserve and is not paying the fee imposed by the Secretary." As a matter of fact, Mr. Matthews' sheep were immediately removed upon notice by the forest officers and have not since entered the reserve.

In the Sheridan, Wyo., Post it is said: "A decision fraught with importance to Wyoming stockmen is that appearing in this issue, wherein it is held by the United States District Court that the collection of fees for grazing live stock is illegal.  Since its imposition this fee has been regarded as illegal and arbitrary by many well-informed Wyoming people, and the views expressed by the court in this decision meet with general approval here.  The litigant is still running his sheep on the Rainier Reserve without paying the fees." Decisions like Judge Whitson's had before been made by the Federal courts in three other districts, one of them six years ago, but none of these interferes in the slightest with the right of the United States to institute civil action against trespassers violating the grazing regulations, or with charging the grazing fee. The United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit decided definitely, in the case of Dastervignes vs. United States, that the provisions of the act of March 4, 1897, delegating to the Secretary the power to make regulations, is constitutional, that the regulation prohibiting the pasturing of sheep on forest reserves without a permit is valid, and that the Federal courts will enforce the regulation by injunction. The Supreme Court of Arizona, three judges sitting, in the case of Dent vs. United States (76 Pacific Reporter, 455,) went still further, under circumstances which made the decision most emphatic. Dent was criminally prosecuted for grazing sheep on a forest reserve without a permit, in violation of the regulations, and the court had held that his act was not a crime; but as soon as the Dastervignes case was decided for the Government the Arizona court granted a rehearing of the Dent case and held that the Dastervignes decision was binding on all courts in the Ninth Circuit in criminal as well as civil cases, and that Dent was therefore guilty of a crime.

So far, therefore, the court decisions as to the criminality of trespass contrary to the forest-reserve regulations are conflicting. Final adjudication of the point can not be had until the ruling of a higher court has been secured; but no court has questioned the right of the Secretary of Agriculture to make regulations and to recover damages for trespass through civil action.

Grazing trespassers will be restrained from violation of the regulations by injunction proceedings and sued for civil damages until the higher courts shall have reached a decision as to the criminal character of such trespasses. The Forest Service will continue to exclude unpermitted stock from all forest reserves and to collect grazing fees for all stock under permit.

Advertise Oregon.

Portland, Oregon, Jan. 7th, 1907. Editor Journal—Never at any time since Oregon became a state has there been such widespread interest in her development, as is evidenced by the letters received from all parts of the United States by the Oregon Development League.

President T. B. Wilcox, of the State League, has just authorized an increase in the advertising in thoroughly reliable agricultural publications of large circulation. These advertisements are devoted exclusively to the agricultural lands of the state, for it is an increased farm population that Oregon needs more than all else combined. Put energetic farmers on the vacant lands, cut up the large ranches and the cities, towns and villages of Oregon will grow and prosper. With that end in view Oregon is being advertised as never before, and the inquiry is three times as great as it was during the Lewis & Clark Exposition.

Many communities of the State are sending out literature to inquirers lists of whom are being furnished to each and every one of the sixty-three organizations composing the Oregon Development League. Letters of inquiry are coming in many languages—English, German, Swedish and Polish lead; letters are coming from every state in the Union, but Minnesota, Iowa, Kansas, Wisconsin, the Dakotas, and Nebraska, are about equal in number, and it is from just these portions of the United States that we want our immigration. An accurate conception of the enormous correspondence can best be had from the fact that it cost $527.00 to pay the outgoing postage for the past twenty-five days from the Postoffice alone.

Remember that it is in January that you get more readers than any other month, because the farmers in the cold sections of the country are resting, but February is also important. One piece of literature and a personal letter sent today are worth more than ten during the farmer's busy season.
