

HISTORIC TRIAL WILL BEGIN TODAY

Review of Steunenberg Murder and After Events.

On May 9th the attention of the reading public will be turned toward Boise, Idaho, for then will begin the trial of William D. Haywood, secretary of the Western Federation of Miners, one of the three men held on a charge of being responsible for the murder of Frank Steunenberg, ex-governor of Idaho, says a dispatch to the Oregonian. The other two are Charles H. Moyer, president of the Federation, and George A. Pettibone, formerly a member of the executive committee of the organization. The men demanded separate trials and the state elected to try the case against Haywood first.

There have been few murder cases in the country attracting so much attention. Widespread interest was aroused at once on the announcement of the arrest of the Federation leaders, and that interest has deepened as time has passed. The subject has been so widely discussed and the lines between the adherents of the two sides have been so sharply drawn that the case has assumed national importance, and in every part of the country the keenest interest is taken in it.

It has been necessary to expand the telegraphic facilities enormously to make it possible to handle the case, but the Western Union is prepared to send out some 200,000 words a day and can handle more if necessary. The case has been discussed everywhere as each chapter has unfolded, but at this time, on the eve of the trial, a consecutive narrative of the various stages will prove of interest.

History of the Case.

Frank Steunenberg was assassinated at the gate of his home at Caldwell, Canyon Co., Idaho, at 6 o'clock on the afternoon of December 30, 1905. As he opened the gate a bomb attached to a wire was exploded, and he was hurled some ten feet into the yard. His right side was fearfully mangled and he died in a few minutes after being carried into his home.

As was afterward learned from the man who set it, the bomb contained ten pounds of giant powder. The powder caps were placed and over all was a mixture of sugar and potash. The exploding agency was a bottle of sulphuric acid so adjusted that when the gate opened the wire pulled the cork. This caused instantaneous combustion, which exploded the dreadful engine of death.

The assassination caused great excitement, and the news flashed over the country produced a profound sensation. Everyone realized that it was no ordinary crime, as the method employed indicated a measure of deliberation and vindictiveness not often witnessed. There were theories of all kinds, but the minds of people generally ran back to the time in 1899 when the victim, then serving as governor laid an iron hand upon the situation in the Cour d'Alenes and brought upon himself the denunciations of a vast number of people. While he had always been supported by what may be designated as the business interests of the state, the miners were incensed against him, particularly those affiliated with the Western Federation, and union men quite generally joined in their condemnation of him.

Confession of Orchard.

January 2 a man calling himself Thomas Hogan was arrested. He had been suspected from the first, having been hanging about with no apparent business. A few days later he was identified as Harry Orchard, a man who had figured in the Cripple Creek disturbances and was in the Cour d'Alenes in 1899. A preliminary examination was held January 13-15, and Orchard was held without bail on the charge of having committed the murder. For safe keeping he was lodged in the penitentiary. There he was visited by James McParland, the well-known detective in charge of the Western branch of the Pinkerton agency. Orchard made to McParland what is said to be a confession, which served as the basis of the case worked up against the officers of the Western Federation.

Knowledge of this confession was kept carefully from the world; there was no hint of it until, on February 17, Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone were arrested in Denver. Then some features of it were given out, but it has never become public in its entirety and there is nothing but the statements of those connected with the prosecution to indicate what its nature is. The statements made respecting it are in a general way that Orchard detailed a plot participated in by the defendants which embraced the murder of Governor Steunenberg. He claimed to have been sent here for the purpose of committing the crime and that Jack Simpkins, a member of the executive committee, had visited Caldwell with him and assisted in planning the work. Orchard is said to have told of a great many crimes that he ascribed to the initiative of the officials of the federation. But the story will soon be brought out and the public will know what it is. The supposition is that a great many matters will be included in Orchard's testimony, and his statements will be attacked by all the testimony available for the purpose.

Defendants Spirited Away.

When the prosecution was ready to arrest Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone a complaint was sworn out against them and a warrant issued in this they were charged, under the Idaho law, with being principals in the crime, the warrant alleging they committed the deed. Governor Gooding issued a requisition upon the governor of Colorado for the extradition of the men accompanying the papers in the case was a copy of the alleged confession made by Orchard. Governor McDonald took the matter under consideration for some days, and then issued his extradition warrant.

Moyer was arrested just as he was boarding a train on the Burlington road; Haywood was taken into custody in a house to which he had been shadowed, and Pettibone was taken at his place of business. All the men were lodged in the County Jail for the remainder of the night. A special train was secured, and at 5 o'clock A. M. the officers left with their prisoners for a rapid run to Idaho. News of the arrest had not leaked out, and the train was well on its way before it became known that the men were in custody.

This is what has been designated as the kidnapping of the men. It has been insisted by the friends of the defendants that they should have been permitted to consult counsel in Denver and resist removal by appeal to the courts. The State, on the other hand, has insisted that it is not the duty of officers to thus invite legal proceedings after having made an arrest on regular extradition papers. Out of these conflicting contentions grew the legal proceedings which delayed the trials a year.

Relief from Rheumatic Pains.

"I suffered with rheumatism for over two years," says Mr. Roland Curry, a patrolman, of Key West, Fla. "Sometimes it settled in my knees and lamed me so I could hardly walk, at other times it would be in my feet and hands so I was incapacitated for duty. One night when I was in severe pain and lame from it my wife went to the drug store here and came back with a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. I was rubbed with it and found the pain had nearly gone during the night. I kept on using it for a little more than two weeks and found that it drove the rheumatism away. I have not had any trouble from that disease for over three months." For sale by D. P. Adamson.
