

THE OREGON TRUNK RAILROAD

According to the Portland Oregonian the Oregon Trunk Railroad engineers have completed their final surveys and located the proposed line for a distance of forty five miles from the mouth of the Deschutes river. Preliminary surveys have been made for a considerable distance farther into Central Oregon, and the projectors of the line announce their intention of beginning construction work as soon as there is an easing of the present strain in the money market.

The Oregon Trunk is the latest organization to take up the Central Oregon transportation problem, and, to all appearances, has located the most feasible route for entering that rich field. The Columbia Southern, which pointed the way to development of the great resources of the central part of the state, has always been regarded as possessing physical disabilities too great to admit of its becoming a "through" line to the southern part of the state. It is of inestimable value as a feeder from that portion of Sherman and Wasco counties which it traverses, but the very heavy grades and sharp curves preclude the possibility of its ever becoming a through line for heavy traffic.

The Oregon Trunk is reported to have found a maximum grade of but 1 per cent, with the average for the first forty-five miles only three-tenths of one per cent.

The management of the Oregon Trunk in selecting the Deschutes route has not only secured an easy grade for the big traffic which in time will come out of Central Oregon, but, owing to the remarkably small rise and fall of the waters of the Deschutes river, the cost of maintenance will be reduced to a minimum. The proposed route is undoubtedly the easiest and most natural for reaching Central Oregon, and with east and west feeders and connections will admit of great exploitation of the wonderful riches of that region. The Oregon Trunk, through the location of its Columbia river terminus, will be in an exceptionally independent position in the way of an outlet. It can connect directly with the O. R. & N. at the mouth of the Deschutes river or extend its line to open river connection at The Dalles, while connection with the North-Bank road would be an easy problem by means of a short bridge across some of the narrow places in the Columbia river.

Redmond, Ore., Oct. 12. Well, we are back. That is the most important piece of news to us individually. We got in Sunday noon from Shaniko with Mr. and Mrs. Trisler and Mrs. Park, senior. In Shaniko we met Mr. Lilly who was just getting back from the meeting of the synod at Portland. W. R. Lawson was also in Shaniko on a hurried trip. We saw Mrs. Simons and Bernice who are looking as well and hearty as ever. P. K. passed us twice on the road in the night. We met Mr. Muma on the road Saturday morning with wheat going in. Also passed the noted road engine Thursday noon at the head of Cow canyon and met it Friday forenoon as we were coming out. We presume from all reports that it has been met on the road for the last time as it seems to be no success.

Mr. Gibson is moving on the Iverson place for the winter. M. L. Ogden has built on his homestead just across the road from the Iverson place. It seems good to have another house on the road to town.

It is reported that J. T. Cudmore is about leaving us. We did not learn where his destination will be.

Everybody seems to be digging potatoes at present.

We are looking forward to a pleasant time at the Prineville fair and hope to meet many others there.

Lots of wheat going in to Shaniko by wagons and lots of threshing yet to do in the Madras country. E. C. Park

The present term of the district court is one of the shortest on record. Three days will practically finish the term.

A Certain Cure for Croup—Used for Ten Years Without a Failure.

Mr. W. C. Bott, a Star City, Ind., hardware merchant, is enthusiastic in his praise of Chamberlain's cough remedy. His children have all been subject to croup and he has used this remedy for the past ten years, and though they much feared the croup, his wife and he always felt safe upon retiring when a bottle of Chamberlain's cough remedy was in the house. His oldest child was subject to severe attacks of croup, but this remedy never failed to effect a speedy cure. He has recommended it to friends and neighbors and all who have used it say that it is unequalled for croup and whooping cough. For sale by D. P. Adamson.
