

Suggestions From an Expert as to a Publicity Campaign.

BUSINESS MEN IN CHARGE.

First Important Duty is to Lay Plans For Securing a Larger Rural Population From Which to Draw Local Trade-Present Facts That Appeal.

More than a hundred cities and towns in the United States are now conducting successful advertising campaigns in their own behalf. Some Canadian cities also boom themselves by this direct method of publicity. In a recent paper read at a meeting of commercial clubs by Curtis L. Mosher, manager of the publicity bureau of St. Paul, some valuable suggestions were given. Mr. Mosher's remarks on municipal advertising are applicable to any town which desires to present its attractions to the outside public Among other things he says:

"No municipal advertising campaign can succeed until it has the united support of practical business men. Some body must be responsible for the collection of necessary funds, even though only a moderate and economical cam paign is decided upon. Some one must be responsible for the results. Otherwise the campaign will be only desultory and unsatisfactory. The best and most practical man the municipality can bring forward should be made chairman of the general committee In charge of the work or be officially designated by some similar arrangement as the manager and director in charge of the work.

"The best beginning that a municipality can make in considering an advertising campaign is to look well to its appearance, attractiveness and local ements."

Mr. Mosher dwells upon the importance of clean and well lighted streets, good sidewalks, the removal of dilapidated buildings along business streets, a first class hotel, a public library, attractive approaches to the rallway station, rest rooms for women and public drinking fountains.

"As no town or city," continues Mr. Mosher, "can grow faster than the business from its local and tributary population permits, the first important duty of local business men is to consider the possibility of securing a larger rural population on which to draw for increased business. To get this population and to build up the agricultural resources of the tributary territory is one of the important ends to be sought in the local advertising campaign

"The merchants with country trade should get lists of friends of their customers living in distant states and send them a letter framed up something like this: 'Mr. ---, who is a prosperous farmer llving - miles from this town, is successfully farming ---- acres and this year raised such and such crops, clearing such and such profits. He has given me your name, and 1 am writing you to tell you of the spiendid agricultural resources of this section and the excellent opportunities near this town and adjacent to the farm operated by your friend, which you millionaires going into the business may perhaps wish to utilize.' Make the don't always strike Standard oil.

THE SIMPLE LIFE. The simple life I love to sing Because it's mosteril With bleading lumins and mooing cown And harnyard jing-a-ling. We wear a bright red sunbonnet And locaely fitting priots; We never dress for minnets Nor put on beauty tints.

We have our cow and chickens, too, A hog, a mule, a churn; We never could refurn to you. In city heat to burn.

We've done for ayo with city strife. Give us our hops and chickens. We're badly stuck on simple life: For fun it beats the dickens. C. M. B.

THE WYANDOTTES:

.This breed was at first commonly called "American Sebrights," which was changed to "Wyandotte" after the Indians of that name. Historians have failed to trace the time and circumstances of its origin, but all claim it to be an American bird with Dark Brahma and Hamburg blood in its veins. Today the man who originates a breed erects a marble statue to himself li no one else will. The varietles are Silver, Golden, Sliver Penciled, Partridge, Columbian, Black, Buff and White,

Mr. Mosher dwells at considerable length upon the desirability of keeping commercial clubs supplied with local data and information; of having county exhibits at the state fair; of securing state and district conventions; of having products marked "Made in ----.

"The most dangerous error commonly made in direct advertising for the city or town is to yield too far to the natural feeling of local pride and construct the advertisement or printed matter in such a way that as a matter of fact it is more energetic in praising and placing the city in an agreeable light than it is in presenting purely business facts and arguments that will appeal to a business man.
