AUTO CAUGHT IN A CLOUDBURST

Saved twice from death as by a miracle, W. F. Nelson and V. D. Williamson, of the Oregon Trunk Line, who recently visited Crook county for the Hill railroad interests, passing through this city to Bend in company with the Porter Bros., of Spokane, had the experience of their lives in the Haycreek country while on their way out.

Overwhelmed by a cloudburst, swept down a precipitous mountainside by the torrents of water that fell in sheets and escaping from death by a hairbreadth, they reached Portland after an automobile trip into the interior, some of the experiences of which they do not want to go through again.

The two men, who were driven south into the interior by Jack Harrison, a Portland chauffeur, made the greater part of the trip in safety, but on the return journey ran into a cloudburst near Haycreek. While bowling along a mountain road, a sudden rain storm that reached the proportions of a cloudburst came up. The water fell in torrents and the road followed by the automobile along a steep hillside was suddenly washed out, the automobile precipitated down the mountainside and the party of railway men thrown down a steep hill. Luckily, no one was hurt, but the machine had to be brought back to the road with the aid of a windlass and all hands had to tug at the ropes to bring the automobile up the hill. Soon after surmounting this first accident the party plunged into a mountain torrent which likewise nearly overwhelmed them, but by dint of strenuous effort got safely through.

MAKE STUDY OF OREGON SOILS

Members of the faculty of the State Agricultural College, assisted by experts from the Department of Agriculture, have begun a most important investigation of the soils of Eastern Oregon. The work is undertaken at the request of residents of Crook, Sherman, Wallowa, Morrow, Umatilla, Union, Baker and Harney counties and will include, not only a chemical analysis of the soils to determine what crops may be most successfully grown, but will extend to a thorough study of water sheds and dry farming conditions. It is believed such a report will prove of much value in determining where experimental stations should be established by the Agricultural College.

It is probable the investigation will lead to plans to be recommended for the reclamation of vast tracts of arid lands in Eastern Oregon under the adoption of irrigation systems as well as modern methods of dry farming. The Campbell system of the dry method is attracting much attention in various parts of the West and is said to have proven an unqualified success in regions where the rainfall is from 10 to 14 inches annually. This as well as other methods will be thoroughly tested at the experimental farms to be located.

The party consists of: President W. J. Kerr, Professor H. D. Scudder, W. A. Jensen, all of the Agricultural College; Professor William Jardine, expert in dry farming, and A. P. Stover, irrigation expert, both of the Department of Agriculture.
