POTATOES MAKE MOST PROFIT

"Land is Too Valuable For Wheat Raising," Say Farmers About Redmond.

In passing over the northern part of the irrigated section between O'Neil and Cline Falls one is convinced that Crook county is a country of many and varied resources. This year everyone in that vicinity has been successful in producing from average to good crops and it is easily seen that the people have not been fooled as to the quality of the soil or the climatic conditions.

It has been proved by past experience that wheat is not a successful crop on many of the lands here and as one of the residents put it, "The land is too valuable, anyhow, for wheat growing." Oats are very successful but potatoes, and other kinds of root crops yield wonderfully and naturally bring the biggest returns, acreage and labor required to plant and harvest considered.

In no part of Crook county can better potatoes be seen, and this year the surplus is being hauled to Shaniko and thence shipped to market at a very good price. Potatoes as they are grown in the Redmond country produce at least twice as much profit to the farmer than is possible for wheat or other grain under the most favorable conditions.

In no part of interior Oregon are there more beautiful homes or better kept ones than in this vicinity and the people are busy and contented.

Oregon Eastern Survey.

C. R. Rankin and his crew of engineers on the Oregon Eastern line, who have been at work on this survey for the past three years, have practically finished their work and 15 of their number came in yesterday, says the Eugene Register. Mr. Rankin stayed all night at the office at Goshen checkup matters and getting ready to move south on Sunday. The entire crew will be held together and will not be scattered as was the case last year, and it is possible this is for the purpose of being in readiness for construction work.

Of course there is little that these surveyors can say—in fact, they are not allowed to give out any word, but we have heard enough to warrant us in saying that the routes found are thoroughly practicable and are much better than hoped for. It is practically certain that as soon as the reports are filed at headquarters, news will be flashed that work will be started at once.

It is a well known fact that the Great Northern or Jim Hill, has 2 crews of engineers in the Deschutes now, working south into southern and eastern Oregon, tapping the territory that the Oregon Eastern is aimed to control, and if active work is not started on the road by Harriman, the Hill interests will undoubtedly capture it. We only await the news now, and when it does come, Eugene will need no further boosting.
