BEEF FOR THE SHOW RING.

To produce a beef animal for show purposes it is not sufficient that the animal be given a few weeks of training at the end to round him into proper condition. It is essential to commence the training of the animal at birth. For beef purposes it has been my experience that the calf from an Angus cow, sired by a white or roan Shorthorn bull, has given the best satisfaction. I aim to have the calf born some time between Dec. 1 and the last of January. This will get the calf into proper condition, so that he will derive the benefits of the early seed in the spring.

From birth until August the calf is allowed to run with the mother. The cow is milked twice each day, so that a supply of milk will be maintained for the calf as long as desirable. When six weeks old it is given a little linseed oil cake and yellow turnips. About the middle of May the cow and calf are turned into the pasture, where they are left until the 1st of August. The calf is then taken from the mother and put into a box stall, which is kept well bedded with clean, fresh straw.

The calf is suckled twice each day and given plenty of green feed. In the morning I give him also a little linseed cake and in the evening a little grain, consisting of equal parts of oats and bran. His exercise consists of an hour or two each afternoon in an open lot. After Sept. 1 I also feed him a few turnips.

About three weeks before the opening of the show I commence to give the calf more personal care and training. His feed continues as before, but his exercise is all taken at the rope's end. Each afternoon I lead him up and back a half mile lane. He is allowed to travel at his own leisurely pace, but is required to keep moving and to keep his head held up. After this he is given a lesson in standing, turning around and starting at the snap of the whip. Through this means he soon loses all shyness and will feel at ease when led into the show ring. Each day, usually in the morning, I sponge him off with cold water and blanket him, thus encouraging the growth of the hair.

A few days before he is expected to be shown I polish his horns, oil his hoofs and curl his coat of hair. To polish his horns I first go over them with the rasp, followed respectively by the emery, sandpaper and a piece of glass. This treatment is applied but the first time, and each day following I polish the horns with a pumice stone and a little olive oil. His feet are trimmed and a little oil and lampblack occasionally applied to give them a darker appearance. To curl the hair the calf is first sponged off with cold water until his hair is thoroughly wet.

Now, beginning at the head and working back, I comb his coat straight down. Next I turn the comb edgewise and draw a series of parallel lines the long way of the animal. This is followed by combing lightly from the bottom upward, which leaves the hair in long, horizontal rows of curls. The hair is neatly parted in the middle on the forehead and backward over the neck to the shoulder. This is repeated each day until the day of the show. On the morning that he is to be shown I polish his hoofs and horns and curl his hair. He is not given much feed, as this would give him a pouchy appearance. After this he is given a short walk and is then ready to be led into the show ring.

To handle an animal in the show ring requires a good deal of skill and adeptness. A poorer animal, well shown, quite often takes a blue ribbon over a better one poorly shown. I aim to keep the fore feet of the animal on a little higher ground when possible. The head of the animal must at all times be held high and when standing should stand evenly on all four feet. The showing is, of course, the climax of the whole thing. I try to keep one eye on the animal and the other on the judge. — John Palmer, Herdsman at University of Illinois.

Flocks That Pay.

It is not necessarily the largest flock that nets the largest profits. A smaller one well cared for and freed from loafers may pile up the net gain much faster even if the gross income should be decreased.

FEEDING HORSES.

Variety of Grains Properly Balanced Give Best Results.

One of the commonest faults in feeding horses is the lack of variety in feed. Considering the number of different grains and feed stuffs, it does seem strange that every team owner should not provide for his animals a ration that would be perfectly acceptable to its system at all times. It is a fact, however, that no more than 20 per cent feed what may be termed a well balanced ration.

The other 80 per cent still cling to the old ration of corn and hay or oats and hay, which practical experiments have long since proved to be expensive and wasteful. When it comes to feeding your horses, just think of your own appetite. Supposing you were performing hard work, manual labor, how long would you be content to eat two articles of food, the same thing for every meal, day after day? It is pretty safe to say that you would tire of your ration in a very short time.

A bad digestion and a poorly nourished body are always the results of improperly balanced food, writes a breeder in American Cultivator. When such a condition exists in either man or horse the best physical effort cannot be expected; it is impossible. No one or two articles of feed will supply to your horses all the elements of nutrition that their system needs. If you want the best results, feed a ration that contains all the elements of nutrition in properly balanced portions. Corn alone is not a well balanced grain for feeding; neither are oats nor barley.

Of the three grains oats are probably fed more extensively than are corn and barley combined. Barley is rapidly gaining favor as a feed, however, and when properly combined with the other grains makes an ideal ration.

We cannot emphasize too strongly the necessity for grinding the grain part of the ration. The horse owner who fails to do this loses 25 to 50 per cent of the nutritive value. The hard outer covering of the grain makes it difficult to digest, and a very large proportion passes through the stomach of the animal in an undigested condition. An examination of the feeds will show the whole grain and prove the truth of this statement. When you feed a ground ration you prepare it for quick digestion. Your animals utilize it more readily, and there is practically no waste. It should be remembered that the horse digests its food quickly, and whatever ration you feed should be prepared with a view to supply the nutrition the horse needs. Your horses will work better and keep in better condition on five or six quarts of ground mixed seed than they will on eight quarts of whole grain.

Feed a variety of grains properly balanced and have them well ground, and you will not only have better horses, but it will cost you less money to obtain this much desired result.

Running the Hand Separator.

When running the hand separator, the handle should be turned steadily, care being taken to keep a constant even pressure all the way round, not pushing down hard and pulling up hard, while for a moment when the crank is down and again at the top there is no pressure upon it. Turn at the speed the directions call for, or if it is found by testing the skimmilk that it is not skimming clean an increased speed of from three to five turns per minute will help matters.—Bulletin Michigan Experiment Station.

THE SWINEHERD.

Tests at the Indiana experiment station indicate that pigs make better gains when their grain is fed dry than they do when it is mixed with water. This would suggest that those who take the trouble to mix grain with water before feeding waste their time and to a slight extent the food value of the grain.

The Piggens In Summer.

In summer, if the pig keeper is wise, a large proportion of his stock will be running out to grass. Then of course is an opportune time to give the vacant piggeries a thorough cleansing and lime washing to set drainage of yards and outlets right and attend to any structural repairs that may be necessary. On a dairy farm especially should the piggeries be kept in a sanitary condition. If neglected, offensive odors arise from them. In many cases the dairy is not far away. This is a point which should be watched. When building or rebuilding pens let them be as far removed as possible from the dairy, for this is not only objectionable, but really harmful, as few things absorb the impurities of the atmosphere more readily than milk.

Protein Feeds of the Farm.

For the pig two to six months old protein is the most important feed. Without protein it cannot build up the lean meat or grow to any size. Protein is found in skimmilk, clover and alfalfa. Corn is nine-tenths carbohydrates. Oats have a little more protein than corn, but not sufficient for the pig. Rye contains a little more protein than corn. Barley is one of the best feeds on the farm. It contains more protein than rye. In clover and alfalfa there is a large bulk for the required nutrients, and pigs cannot get enough for a maximum growth. Even if you have corn and clover it is still necessary for the young pig to have some protein food—cowpeas, soy beans or Canada field peas. There is nothing better grown on the farm to balance up the ration.—Professor William Dietrich.

Contest Notice.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
United States Land Office,
The Dalles, Oregon, November 18, 1908.

A sufficient contest affidavit having been filed in this office by contestant, against homestead (Serial No. 01895) entry No. 14582, made April 19, 1905, for SE¼SE¼, Section 4; SW¼SW¼, Section 3; NW¼SW¼, Section 10; NE¼SE¼, Section 9; Township 13 South, Range 16 East, Willamette Meridian, by Alexander W. Ramsey, contestee, in which it is alleged that said Alexander W. Ramsey has wholly abandoned said tract for more than six months last past; that he has not resided upon and cultivated said tract as required by law; that said alleged absence was not due to his employment in the army, navy or marine corps of the United States in time of war, said parties are hereby notified to appear, respond and offer evidence touching said allegation at 10 o'clock A. M. on January 6, 1909, before Warren Brown, county clerk, at his office in Prineville, Oregon, and that final hearing will be held at 10 o'clock A. M. on January 12, 1909, before the Register and Receiver at the United States Land Office in The Dalles, Oregon. The said contestant having, in a proper affidavit, filed November 16, 1908, set forth facts which show that, after due diligence, personal service of this notice can not be made, it is hereby ordered and directed that such notice be given by due and proper publication.
