The Holidays Are Over But Our Big Bargains Continue

This winter finds us with the strongest line of shoes we have ever carried. Our increasing business has caused us to carry a larger and better stock, so we have a larger variety than ever before. We call your attention to the extra values which we are offering and in each shoe you will find the quality higher than the price.

Redmond News.

REDMOND, OREGON, DEC. 27. Wives of the Woodmen got their heads together not long since and the result was they stormed the local camp last night during a special meeting. For ammunition they were supplied with plenty of rounds of biscuits, pickles, beans, cheese, nuts, cake and coffee and the Woodmen were not long in capitulating. We hope that this is only the beginning of a series of social events in which Woodmen and prospective choppers shall take the leading part. The ladies seemed to enjoy surprising as much as the men liked to be surprised.

E. O. Getchell and wife departed for White Salmon, Wash., last Monday, where they will spend the summer. They plan then to return, build better and further improve their place on which they have made a nice beginning this fall. Mr. Worrell will have charge of the place the coming year.

A. O. Walker and wife from the Johnson ranch neighborhood are visiting with H. A. Meyers and family over Christmas time.

Mr. Martin, father of Mrs. Kendall and Mrs. Kenyon, is here visiting from North Dakota.

We note the oldest son of D. C. Hall among the new arrivals. We are glad to welcome the young man to the community.

C. L. Lowther expects to move to Redmond this week from his Trull Crossing farm. He has rented rooms in the Lauderback building and will begin a series of meetings for the Methodists next Sunday night.

McLain and young have a forty-acre job of clearing just west of C. M. Redfield's farm.

The sale of town lots has been quite brisk the past week. Kirk White bought two and Perry Smith four. Both will proceed to improve immediately.

The Sunday School entertainment Thursday night brought out what was probably the biggest indoor crowd ever assembled in Redmond. It is thought that over two hundred were present. The Sunday School room was taxed to its utmost. If some of the little folks were a little disconcerted at so many being present and forgot their lines and if the team work was not always perfect, it is not to be wondered at or laid up against them. Even Santa Claus remembered how things looked at his first appearance here three years ago and wondered where so many people came from.

Mrs. Tuck is reported as being ill in bed.

Clint Woods, B. J. Henninger and E. C. Park will be visitors at the Gist sawmill this week.

The long dry spell is being broken this evening by the appearance of water in the ditches.

C. N. Ehret moved yesterday into his new house and the family is now pleasantly situated. It is a well arranged, commodious home. A dormer window overlooks the town and gives a good view of the mountains in the distance. We shall be glad to see others build as well.

We did not have a full report of the election of Sunday School officers today, but heard that Mrs. W. B. Chapman was elected superintendent.

We hoped in this letter to give a brief resume of some of the improvements that have been in progress in the vicinity of Redmond during the past year, but did not get the material in shape. When the improvements of a year are bunched together they make a showing of which we have reason to be proud.

Culver Cullings.

Culver, Ore., Dec. 28. After a stay of 25 days at Culver, the Harriman surveyors have departed for the mouth of the Deschutes river.

Monday, at noon, C. J. Milligan's house caught fire, burning a hole in the roof.

John and Lee Peck and families, who have spent several months near Medford are coming back to Crook county again.

Christmas eve many people attended the Christmas Cantata at the school house, after which they went over to Culver hall and attended a dance given by the surveyors.

Roscoe Howard, manager of the D. I. & P. Co. passed through Culver Saturday enroute for Portland.

Mr. Giles and family, old residents of Crook county, who have been absent for a few years stopped over in Culver on their return to their home near Redmond.

Mrs. Jesse Harcrow is here from Portland visiting her mother, Mrs. Spinks.

Mrs. Thomas Alderdyce, who went to Seattle several weeks ago to visit her mother, is expected home next week.

A dance will be given at Culver hall Friday night, January 1. A basket supper will be brought by those who attend.

Misses Lula Osborn and Lottie Fendall who spent several months at Bend, came home last week.
