Fourth of July.

left field; Ralph Jordan, center field and Elmer Mitchell, right field. Ketchum will also relieve Bailey in the box if the occasion demands it. Arthur Barnes and Edgar Barnes are subs for the team.

The report is current among the ball players that the team they are to go up against will be composed of five players from Bend and four from Redmond, which will play under the name of the Bend team. The Redmond men who will play are said to be Jesse Tetherow, Wm. Immele, Claude McCauley and McKinney, the man who played second base in the games here in May.

There is the prospect that the visitors will bring a strong team and there is no doubt that the contest will be a hot one. The combing of the players from the west side is perfectly agreeable to the Prineville team and to the celebration committee, who are desirous of giving the people who attend the celebration the very best exhibition of the sport possible, so long as the players are Crook county boys.

Dressmaking.

Mrs. Nora Baker and Mrs. James Dyer have formed a partnership and will go into the dressmaking business at the latter's home in this city. Wedding trousseaus a specialty, but will do all kinds of work. Call on the ladies. 6-3

Expert Saw Man.

G. H. Dory will be in Prineville three days the first of each month for the purpose of hammering and putting saws in first-class condition; work guaranteed. Special calls should be sent to Howard. 6-3-1m

A Crusher.

Legge, bishop of Oxford, who had not youth as his excuse for his vapid, asked his friend Canning to come and hear his first episcopal sermon. They dined together afterward, and from the politician's silence the other ought to have known better than to push him; but, being rather nettled, he exclaimed, "Canning, you have said nothing to me about my sermon."
"Well, it was short."
"Oh," said the bishop, "it is better to be short than tedious."
"But," replied Canning, "you were that too."

The Parrot's Response.

A maiden lady in England owned a parrot, which somehow acquired the disagreeable habit of observing at frequent intervals, "I wish the old lady would die." This annoyed the bird's owner, who spoke to her curate about it.

"I think we can rectify the matter," replied the good man. "I also have a parrot, and he is a righteous bird, having been brought up in the way he should go. I will lend you my parrot, and I trust his influence will reform that depraved bird of yours."

The curate's parrot was placed in the same room with the wicked one, and as soon as the two had become accustomed to each other the bad bird remarked, "I wish the old lady would die," whereupon the clergyman's bird rolled up his eyes and in solemn accents added, "We beseech thee to hear us, good Lord!"

The story got out in the parish, and for several Sundays it was necessary to omit the litany at the church services.

Modest.

A young Canadian humorist who went over to England hoping to find London editors in receptive mood forwarded a contribution to Punch with this note: "Dear Sir—I arrived in London this morning and paid a visit to Westminster abbey this afternoon. I found this call depressing, for a man naturally shrinks from inspecting the spot where he is to be buried."

A Black Mark For the Other One.

A man by the name of Evans died and went to heaven, of course. When he arrived at the pearly gates he said to St. Peter:

"Well, I'm here."
St. Peter looked at him and asked his name.

"John Evans," was the reply.
St. Peter looked through his book and shook his head. "You don't belong here," he said, pointing to the exit.

"But I am sure I belong here," said the man.

"Wait a minute," said St. Peter. He looked again and in the back of the book found his name.

"Sure," said the guardian of the gate, "you belong here, but you weren't expected for twenty years. Who's your doctor?"

New Aluminium Alloy.

Magnalium, the new alloy of a Berlin syndicate, claims advantages that make it a most important and interesting material. It contains from 90 to 98 per cent of aluminium, the remaining percentage being chiefly magnesium, and it retains the good qualities of aluminium while having the much desired greater hardness and greater tensile strength, with greater resistance to oxidation than any other light metal or alloy. It is almost unaffected by damp air, water, gaseous ammonia, carbonic acid and most organic acids. It can be cast in the liquid condition, like pure aluminium, and the castings can be machined, acquiring a smooth, mirror-like surface. Unlike pure aluminium, it may be cut to perfect screw threads and filed without clogging the file or tearing the material. The uses found are already quite numerous and include kitchen utensils, parts of spraying and milling machinery, saddle skeletons, surgical appliances and chemical apparatus.

IRELAND'S PEAT BEDS.

Proposed Plan to Convert Them into Electrical Energy.

From peat to electrical power is the story of a new enterprise in Ireland. The scheme is to erect a central station upon the Grand canal, about twenty-four miles from Dublin, and to produce blast furnace gas from the peat which will drive huge gas engines, these in turn propelling electric generators of sufficient capacity to furnish electrical energy over Kings county and Kildare.

The process to be exploited is that of a German inventor, whose large factory near Munich has been operating successfully for about two years. Peat containing as much as 50 per cent moisture can be used satisfactorily, the moisture becoming an essential ingredient of the water gas and preventing too rapid combustion. An elaborate plant is to be installed for by-products, such as sulphate of ammonia, tars and tar oils, etc., which in themselves are of appreciable commercial value.

In the German factory the process is of a dual nature. Peat from which 75 per cent of the moisture can be evaporated is converted into peat coke, which is used as a fuel in the German navy and many industrial concerns, while the raw material, which retains half its moisture, is for producing the gas from which the by-products are extracted.

HUGE CARGO UNLOADERS.

New Type of Clam Shell Bucket Eliminates Shoveling.

A new type of clam shell bucket has been installed on the Cleveland and Pittsburg ore docks, Cleveland. The bucket has the enormously wide opening of eighteen feet one inch inside measurement, which is obtained without increasing the height or complexity of the structure. The advantage of this reach in scraping or cleaning up is obvious. The bucket can be operated on any design of unloader using either steam or electricity. Its parts are few and durable and its cost of maintenance is low. The bucket shown in the illustration has been in operation for over a month, requiring no further attention than lubrication.

Especially advantageous is this bucket in discharging the cargo from a twenty-four foot center boat with hatch openings running twelve feet fore and aft. It practically eliminates shoveling by hand. Another advantage, appreciated by operators, is in the position of the trays when the grab is open, as the digging edge of the trays comes in contact with the bulkhead or wing of the boat only, while the top of the trays is over eighteen inches from either bulkhead, wing or stanch, thus taking the ore perfectly clean from any part of the vessel. When the grab is dropped the entire lower edge of the trays comes in contact with the tank top, obviating any damage to the tank top, which feature is greatly appreciated by vessel owners. The bucket will heel and reach to its full opening by simply placing the heavy scoop on only a half bucket of ore.

The bucket is the invention of Mr. Huntsberry of Cleveland.
