Eyes and Other Eyes. Birds' sight is probably not any keener than man's, in spite of the tradition to the contrary, writes Dr. Edward A. Avers in Harper's Magazine. The simple fact is that birds flying atoft are in clearer sir, and their eyes change focus much more rapidly. As Prinewille, for the eyes of fish, those in clear water can focus farthest, and all fish can see nearly everything but their dorsal fins.
