VARIETIES OF PHEASANTS.

"Are you a good wing shot?"
"They just do."
"Well, just wait till the Reeves pheasant gets loose in this country and you'll waste your powder on the desert air."
The Reeves is the rage in the old world for size, beauty and juicy breast meat. See that seven foot tall? When lovelorn he holds it perpendicular or spreads it like a peacock. In flight he is a flash of light, buzzing with twice the velocity of our native birds and able to stop at full speed and drop straight down into a tree.
"Easy murr," did you say?
An Englishman didn't think so. He threw down his gun in disgust and grunted, "That's no pheasant; that's a long tailed skyrocket!"

The birds adapted to our country are the common, Chinese, Japanese, Mongolian, Reeves, Ungenlocks, Prince of Wales and Soemmerrings. Those for the aviary are the Golden, Silver, Amber, Eared, Imperial and Argus. The crosses among these are legion. Best known in United States are English, Chinese, Mongolian, Golden, Silver, Amber and Reeves.

The business birds that are used to restock the west are mostly a cross of the English and Chinese.

China ships most game birds to the United States; Belgium and Canada next in number.

The Reeves, from China, is the popular bird in England and especially REEVES AND GOLDEN TREASURES, adapted to Scotland. In one season on the Suffolk estate 8,700 birds were bagged and 101,000 eggs gathered.

New Jersey raises as high as 20,000 birds a year, and private reserves scattered through the country rear many.

Colorado has an aviary at Denver of 5,000 pheasants on exhibition, a larger collection than that of all the parks of Europe together. As these birds require no more care than thoroughbred chickens, they will soon be bred everywhere.

Yes, dear, the time is nigh when you will no longer drag your weary feet o'er rough mountain roads and through trouser tearing thickets in vain attempt to find a chipmunk on which to try your $500 hammocks. The woods will be full of high fliers, and to lag one Reeves will be glory enough to shed a halo round you for a lifetime.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

The Argus pheasant runs up and down the scale on his flute, and his whistle at night can be heard a mile. The Reeves can jump eight feet and can fly thirty miles at a mile a minute clip without a stop.

A New York duck fancier turns on the light twice each night to get in extra rations to fatten his ducks, while the Wall street fanciers burn Standard oil to fatten lambs. Chicago skins the golden calf.

The anti-noise crusade has hit the roosters. At a New York town council, where a remonstrance was presented, the people were exhorted to place the roosters close to the roof so the roosters cannot stand upright, the advocate stating that a cock cannot crow unless standing. Some town councils certainly ought to know, for they surely do fight, cackle and crow.

"Judge not." The farmers near Hazleton, Pa., lost so many chickens that had blood was caused, various neighbors being openly charged with the thefts. The killing of a four foot owl solved the problem. The skunk is more modern in his poultry enterprises. He advertises widely.

An ostrich has a neck three and a half feet long. Oh, how it would prolong that cold, pleasant feeling in drinking soda!

The Buff Orpington duck is a great layer. In a year's contest with India Runner, Blue Japs, Pekin and Muscovy, six Orpingtons won by laying 1,329 eggs—221 eggs apiece per year.

Land plaster sprinkled on the dropping boards holds the nitrogen, kills odors, and lice cannot live where it is used.

Some of our poultry editors forget that "the pen is mightier than the sword." We remind these dignitaries that cockfighting is outlawed, and we did not pay our subscription to witness a prize fight.

The squab breeders are down in the mouth because their mouths were opened too widely in exaggerating the profits of the biz. Too many squabs on the market spoil the prices.

As the incubator is giving it to the duck in the neck, so she is catching it from many turkey breeders. They are returning to good old mother turkey and will have better luck accordingly.

An ostrich stride when running measures twenty-two feet, but the strides the industry is making are greater. Lady, demand plumes made in America.

There are always cracked window panes in poultry plants. Fix them now. If it is your fault, quit your clumsiness. If your birds are wild as pheasants and break the glass, tame. We use bulldog teeth for fasteners.

Use of Sheep in Reseeding Ranges

Forest Supervisor Ireland says that stockmen throughout the West will be gratified to learn that Uncle Sam is studying means for using sheep to regenerate overgrazed ranges. Unique experiments now being conducted by the United States Forest Service at the experiment station within the Wallowa National Forest in northeastern Oregon demonstrate that the grazing of sheep under proper restrictions is an important factor in the work of reseeding overgrazed ranges.

The problem being studied is that of restoring to depleted ranges their original covering of mountain bunch grass, the scientific name of which is Festuca viridula. This grass is one of the most important of the summer forage plants in the higher ranges of the northwest and its rapid disappearance from the ranges by reason of overstocking could only be regarded as a direct economic loss to the stockmen. Special attention has therefore been given to the restoration of the grass by the plant ecologist of the forest service, and his latest report shows that a thorough reseeding has been secured upon the areas to which a protective grazing system has been applied.

In the initial stage three different methods of reseeding were used. Upon one area the seed was allowed to drop to the ground without treatment. The seed was brushed in with a brush, drag or harrow on the second tract, and upon the third a band of sheep was passed over the area in a compact body twice. This summer it has been found that the area not treated has the lightest stand of seedlings, while the resulting seedling stand on the other two areas showed but little variation in density, but later, during the period of drought the seedlings on the area brushed over died out badly, while on the area upon which the sheep harrowed in the seed there was very little loss.

Closer examination developed the fact that the root systems of the seed which had been tramped in were one-half to one inch deeper in the soil than the root systems of the seed which had been brushed in, this condition being due to the fact that the seed was ground into the soil more deeply by the sheep than by the brush harrow.

So far as the investigation has been carried it indicates that a denser and more drought resistant stand of bunchgrass can be secured where the sheep are allowed on area after the plants have seeded and dropped the seed than where they are excluded throughout the entire season. This discovery is a confirmation of the practicability of the plan to use ranges during alternate spring and fall periods so that a thorough reseeding may be secured by natural means.
