Did you ever see a real genuine bucking bull contest? If not, you were not at the fair grounds at the opening event last Saturday afternoon, for if there is any fun in connection with this kind of a stunt that was not witnessed when James Cram and Lloyd Yancey rode the two old Jerseys in front of the grand stand, it would be hard to guess what it would be.

JIM HILL WILL TURN ON WATER

To Irrigate Land From Prineville to Madras

TAKE CROOKED RIVER PROJECT

Several Tracts Already Purchased in Connection With the Plan.

(Portland Telegram.)

James J. Hill, through the Instrumentality of his Oregon Trunk Line and its subsidiary coporation, the inland Empire Company has begun in this state what will no doubt be the greatest colonization and development scheme he has ever set in motion in any state in the Northwest. The colonization project. which is rapidly assuming form is patterned after the upbuilding of vast regions along the Great Northern Rallroad in Minnesota, Dakota, Montana and Washington. It is a combination of settlement and irrigation under attractive rates and terms to homeseekers from the East.

In the gigantic scheme there have already been purchased 3000 acres of land in the Agency Plains country and in the Opal Prairie, the Phillips Ranch in Crook county, comprising 800 acres; the Heryford ranch near Lakeview, for $50,000 in cash, and one-half the townsite of Madras.

The taking over of the Crooked river irrigation project is now engaging the attention of the Oregon Trunk subsidiary company, while the greatest proposition of all so far as has been announced is the purchase and syndicating of the famous "P" ranch in Harney county, once the greatest cattle ranch in the world. Negotiations are already under way for this magnificent estate of 150,000 acres, which comprises the fertile and apparently inexhaustible valley of the Donner und Blitzen river. The ranch is 10 miles in width and 40 miles in length, and is capable of producing almost any kind of crop indigenous to the temperate

These deals are reputed to be only the beginning of Hill's determination to be the dominating figure in the railroad and industrial development of the vast Oregon empire in the interior.

The first scheme to be developed will be that of the Crooked river irrigation project, upon which the Government has already made some flood waters and to regulate the flow of the Crooked river below the damsite and above the main trries. tion canal. The dam is to be located at a point about 25 miles above Princyfile. Five miles from Princville the intake of the main canal will be located. The plan is to make this irrigation project put something like 200,000 acres of land under water. Engineers are now engaged making surveys to determine just how much territory can be embraced in this project, and the development company is to have everything in shape so that construction work can first tonnage of any consequence de livered into Central Oregon when the new Hill line taps the territory will be cement and other structural material for the Crooked river project which is to be to all intents and purposes a Hill "family affair," Heretofore the cost of getting structural material for dams, canals and other irrigation work into the
