A Land Where Women Are Tyrants. A missionary of long experience in Basutoland has declared that the men there are much more often ill used by their heathen wives than vice versa The fact is that these women, by their labor in the fields and their domestic work, support the men; consequently the latter are dependent upon their wives instead of its being the other way about, as with us, and, the field work making them strong and vigorous, the women are usually quite able to hold their own if ill used-for instance, they sometimes bite off their husbands' ears! However, this does not make it any easier for a woman to become a Christian, because then she feels it wrong to assert berself and hit back, and thus she is at the mercy of her husband, and it is very little mercy she gets when she refuses to comply with beathen customs.-Missionary Review of the World

A curious note in "Pepys' Diary" refers to the unpopularity of hangmen in those days. Commissioner Pett, who had traveled, told Pepys "how despicable a thing it is to be a hangman in Poland, although it is a place of credit, and that in his time there were some repairs to be made of the gallows there, which was very fine, of stone, but nobody could be got to mend it till the burgomaster or mayor of burgomaster did give the first blow with the hammer upon the wooden to their trades that so workmen might

The speaker, a little city waif, pale with the awful pallor of the slums, gave his bucolic host a patronizing smile and laid a familiar hand on his leg. The farmer caught a sheep, opened its mouth and directed the boy to look within.

"You see, sonny," he explained, "the sheep has no incisors, or cutting teeth, in its upper jaw. With its tongue it makes a ball of grass, and it holds this ball firmly between the cutting teeth of the lower jaw and a callous pad-see it?-above. Now, the ball must be cut up. How? With a jerk

THE BIRDS AT CHURCH. One Sabbath morn in fragrant May I heard a whistle rich and long. I spied a golden robin gay Filling the grove with song.

Oh, how inspiring the wondrous hymn That rose from his bubbling throat, While all the feathered choir joined in To swell the praisoful note!

But where is robin, my robin true, Who struck the musical tyre? Don't tell any one and I'll tell you— He sings in our church choir.

The soprano wears his golden breast, The also his wings of fire. The other girls are sporting the rest. He belongs to our siyitsh choir.

Ream not in orchard nor list by rill, Don't linger in shady wood. You will not hear the wild hirds' trill, For they have left for good.

But if you would see the birds you adore,
Go down where good women pray,
And you will find the birds once more
On their hats so stylish and gay.
