False Report About Cattle Starving

A story has been sent out from Portland that gives a false impression of the stock situation in Crook county. Cattle are not dying from starvation on the hills around Prineville. There has been no particular loss to speak of this season. The crucial stage has not yet arrived. The next few weeks will tell the story. If grass can be had on the ranges there will be no greater loss this season than usual. Such stories as the following sent out by the "string fiend," who is paid by the yard, hurt the country:

Portland, Ore.—Cattle on the ranges around Prineville are dying from starvation owing to the hard winter through which they have been forced to go. The national forest service will this week endeavor to get some aid to the cattlemen. Every ounce of feed to be had in that country has been used up to fight off the rigors of the winter.

A long distance call from Prineville to the national forest service office in this city was received, begging the service to open to the cattlemen the Deschutes national forest. Many of the valleys through the reserve are clear of snow and it is the last resource for the cattlemen. The greatest trouble has arisen near Prineville, Paulina and Suplee and on the Crooked river. The cattle will be taken about 50 miles north of the Crooked river and into the creek bottoms which lead out from the national forest. Considerable bunch grass is to be found in this section even at this time of the year.

Oregon Trunk to Build its Bridge.

A special to the Telegram from Washington says that the House of Representatives passed the bill introduced by Representative Ellis authorizing the Oregon Trunk Line to build a bridge across the Columbia River, in order to connect with the North Bank Road, opposite the mouth of the Deschutes River.

Who Are To Be Enumerated

The explicit and lengthy printed instructions to the census enumerators, which have been prepared by the United States Census Bureau, give a clear idea of the character of the answers expected from the people of the United States with regard to the questions in the population schedule to be carried in the Decennial Census April 15 next.

All answers are to have reference solely to the "Census Day," which is April 15. Persons living on that day, but who died after it and before the enumerators call, are to be counted, but persons born after April 15 are not to be included in the count. Persons who were single on April 15 are to be reported single, even though they have married subsequently and before the canvasser has called. This is true, similarly, of persons who became widowed or divorced after April 15.

The census law provides that all persons shall be enumerated at their "usual place of abode" on April 15. This means the place where they may be said to live or belong or the place which is their home. As a rule the usual place of abode is not the place where a person works or where he eats, but where he regularly sleeps. The enumerators are cautioned, however, that where a man happens to sleep at the time of the enumeration may not be the place where he regularly sleeps.

There will be a number of persons having their usual places of abode in enumeration districts who will be absent April 15. These are to be included and enumerated after the facts regarding them have been obtained from their families, relatives, acquaintances, or other persons able to give the information. For instance, if a member of any family in an enumeration district is temporarily away from home on a visit, or on business, or traveling for pleasure or attending school or college, or sick in a hospital, such absent person is to be enumerated and included with other members of the family. But a son or a daughter regularly living in another locality should not be counted with the family at home. Servants, laborers, or other employees, who live with the family, and sleep in the same house or on the premises, should be enumerated with the family.

The Census Bureau states that there will be, on the other hand, a certain number of persons present and perhaps lodging and sleeping in districts at the time of the enumeration who do not have their usual places of abode there. These are not to be enumerated. It must be assumed that they will be enumerated elsewhere. The canvassers should not, therefore, unless it is practically certain that they will not be enumerated anywhere else, enumerate or include with the members of a family they are enumerating any of the following classes:

Persons visiting a family; Transient boarders or lodgers who have some other usual or permanent place of abode;

Students or children living or boarding with a family in order to attend some school, college, or other educational institution in the locality but not regarding the place as their home;

Persons who take their meals with a family but lodge or sleep elsewhere;

Servants, apprentices, or other persons employed by a family and working in the house or on the premises, but not sleeping there; or Any person who was formerly in a family, but who has since become a permanent inmate of an asylum, almshouse, home for the aged, reformatory, prison, or any other institution in which the inmates may remain for long periods of time.

BROILED OWL.

The Feeling in Camp Before and After the First Nibble.

I told the guides that it would be better to begin supper right away in order that we might not get too hungry before the owl was done. I thought them slow in their preparations for the meal. It was curious, too, for I had promised them they should have a piece of the bird. Del was generous. He said he would give his to Charles; that he never really cared much for birds anyhow. Why, once, he said, he shot a partridge and gave it away, and he was hungry too. He gave it to a boy that happened along just then, and when another partridge flew up he didn't even offer to shoot it. We didn't take much stock in that story until it dawned upon us that he had shot the bird out of season, and the boy had happened along just in time to be incriminated by accepting it as a present. It was better to have him as a partner than a witness.

Wood was gathered then, and the fire blazed. The owl's breast-fat and fine it looked—was in the broiler and on the fire. There it cooked—and cooked. Then it cooked some more and sent up an appetizing smell. Now and then I said I thought the time for it had come, but there was a burden of opinion that more cooking would benefit the owl. Meantime we had eaten a pan or two of trout and a few other things, the bird, of course, being later in the bill of fare. It did not seem to be on this occasion. Eddie agreed with Del that he had never cared much for bird anyway and urged me to take his share. I refused to deprive him of it. Then he said he didn't feel well and thought he really ought not to eat anything more. I said grimly that possibly this was true, but that he would eat the owl.

It was served then, fairly divided and distributed, as food is when men are on short rations. I took the first taste—I was always venturesome—a little one. Then immediately I wished I had accepted Eddie's piece. But meantime he had tasted, too—a miserly taste—and then I couldn't have got the rest of it for money.

For there was never anything so good as that breast of young owl. It was tender, it was juicy, it was as delicately flavored as a partridge almost. Certainly it was a dainty morsel to us, who had of late dealt so largely in fish diet. Had we known where the rest of that brood of owls had flown we should have started after them then and there.—Albert Bigelow Paine in Outing Magazine.
