Spring Styles

Utility Coats

The Utility coat is filling a field of great usefulness, as a traveling coat, as an evening wrap.

Made of Pongee or Tussah silk, daintily trimmed.

Made of heavier soft wool materials, they are warm comfortable and stylish.

Short jackets in soft mixtures and covers are much worn as usual every season.

Attractive Styles

Spring Styles are unusually attractive. The length of suit coats is just right—imparting a pleasing style to every figure.

The long roll collar falls gracefully to a low button.

The back is comfortably fitted.

Pleated skirts predominate and are most effective in appearance.

The Portland Pathfinder Car

H. R. Glenn and E. Frank, pathfinders of the Portland Automobile Club, arrived in Prineville Monday evening two days late after a hard trip from The Dalles. They were caught in the recent rain-storm and consequently suffered all the discomforts and inconveniences of automobiling in the mud.

These gentlemen are making maps of this section, showing the best roads, indicating the bad or dangerous places, pointing out the best places at which to stop, and also giving directions where gasoline, oils, repairs, etc., can be had.

Mr. Glenn said that there were a great number of automobile owners in Portland and valley towns that had outgrown local environment and wanted to try longer runs, but were deterred by lack of information. It is this information that the pathfinder party is going to supply. With good roads and good hotels this country should receive an enormous amount of traffic from the automobile traveling public.

From here Mr. Glenn will go to Mitchell, then to Baker City, Pendleton, Umatilla, The Dalles, and back to Portland. From Portland he will go south and then over to Klamath Falls and then on up to the Deschutes valley again.

The party was very favorably impressed with Prineville. Its hotel accommodations were not excelled by towns three or four times its size, and on inspecting the Hodson garage said that there was not a better plant in Portland to take care of the automobile business. Autoists, he said, would find Prineville amply prepared to supply their wants.
