

The Place to Save Money THE LEADER The Place to Save Money

Do You Get Your Money's Worth

People are getting tired of it—getting tired of being held up—they want their money's worth now—the gold brick days are over.

People used to be willing to smoke cabbage leaves in place of Havana and pay good money for it if they got a premium or coupon—willing to buy tea and pay twice its worth just to get a dish free—those days are over—people want their money's worth now—they want what they pay for—value received.

The line of general merchandise we sell offers you your money's worth—we don't have to offer you a lot of cheap inducements to hide cheap quality. When you buy a pair of shoes we don't throw in a premium, your money goes into the value of the shoe. It's the same with our clothing, hats, dry goods and groceries. We sell you the genuine article at a reasonable price. THAT'S ALL. THAT'S ENOUGH.

Surprised at Development Work

A Salem special says: After traveling 1000 miles through Central and Southern Oregon, half of the distance by automobile and stage, State Engineer John H. Lewis is back at the State Capitol and reports that development work and advancement of Cary act projects are a revelation to him.

"During the past few years the development work has been remarkable," he asserts. "At Prineville they are expecting a big rush of settlers because of the recent opening of the road land grants and prospects are bright for a branch of the Oregon Trunk up Crooked River.

"At Laidlaw the indications point to a reorganization of the Columbia Southern project and it is probable construction work will be resumed for the purpose of reclamation of 30,000 acres of valuable land."

"Irrigation development is causing signal activity at Bend. In addition to this factor, timber, railroad construction and water power development are all opening a great era for that already prosperous community. Lots that sold for next to nothing on the main street of the town years ago are now going at $4000. Many new houses are being erected and a great rush of settlers is expected.

"Forty miles south of Bend heavy machinery is being assembled and construction work is beginning on an irrigation project to water 30,000 acres. Development work here is in charge of the Deschutes Land Company. The main line of the Oregon Trunk will go directly through this project and the Natron-Klamath line is to pass within a few hundred feet of the dam site in Crescent Lake, which supplies water for the project. La Pine is the townsite for this development work and there is now talk of moving Roseland, the old town to La Pine so that it will be on the railroad. From La Pine already can be heard the sound of blasting on the Natron-Klamath line, where work is being carried on over the mountain. Every blast is cheerful news to the people of the Deschutes

Shaniko Wool Prices Not Satisfactory

In the prices paid at the latest wool sales in this state there was not much encouragement for the sheepmen who for some weeks have been holding back for a better market, says the Telegram. At Shaniko a little more than half a million pounds of wool changed hands, and the prices ranged from 11 to 15 1/2 cents.

The high price for the day was paid by C. H. Green, representing Koshland & Co., for the T. S. Hamilton clip of 51,000 pounds. The general range of prices was materially under that of three weeks ago, when as high as 17 cents was paid for fancy wool.

The sheepmen naturally are far from satisfied with the market developments to date, and as a result it is said that approximately 1,000,000 pounds of wool still remains unsold in the Shaniko warehouses. In the other wool centers of Eastern Oregon warehouse holdings are also large.

Conditions in the Boston wool market are reported as follows: "The wool market is still quiet, and with prices weak and tending lower. Until the extent of the demand for light-weight goods becomes known there is little expectation of improvement, and interest is centered in the West, where the season is well advanced. Fleeces are the weakest spot in the market, with some sales at the low figures. The new territory wools are coming in very slowly, and as most of them are consigned at limited prices, dealers and manufacturers show little interest. Foreign wools are very quiet.

"Much buying has been done in Montana, in addition to large consignments. The season is nearly over in Oregon, Wyoming and Idaho, some mills having been unusually heavy buyers. The territory wools have been secured this year on a secured basis of about 53@55 cents for clothing and 56@58 cents for medium and staple, these prices being about 15 cents under last year's figures. Growers in the fleece sections are showing more disposition to accept the low bids of dealers.

Threshing Prices for Crook County

The Crook County Threshermen's Association was organized at Madras last Saturday with an attendance of a majority of the threshermen of Crook county.

Prices for threshing were set as follows: Healed wheat, 8c; shocked wheat, 16c; headed barley, 7 1/2c; shocked barley, 9c; headed oats, 7c; shocked oats, 8c; headed rye 16c; shocked rye, 18c.

The officers of the association are: Martin Tellefson, president; A. L. Williams, vice president; J. H. O'Kelly, secretary-treasurer.

The schedule of prices was signed by the following members of the association: Martin Tellefson, John Dobkins, A. L. Williams, Joe Smith, C. H. Foster, Daw Dobkins, Edward O'Kelly, F. A. Smith and J. H. O'Kelly.

Mrs. Edwards Entertains.

Mrs. Charles Edwards entertained last Saturday on the lawn of the Edwards' home. It was a "sunbonnet" party and three fo'd in its nature. It was a "shower" to Miss Celia Nelms, a reception to Mrs. Claude Smith and a "home" party to Miss Winnek who has but recently returned from school in Los Angeles. Three-in-one and blown on the bottle. Mrs. Edwards would liked to have entertained her friends separately, but not feeling well conceived the happy idea of making a triple entertainment. It was held from 11 to 2:20. The young ladies in attendance report a jolly time.

The Hat Straw Crop.
The greater part of the straw employed for making summer hats comes from Italy. To obtain a suitable straw for this purpose the wheat is sown as thickly as possible in order that the growth of the plant may be impoverished as well as to produce a thin stalk. The Italian wheat blooms at the beginning of June and is pulled up by hand by the roots when the grain is half developed. Should it be allowed to remain in the ground a longer time the straw would become too brittle for the purpose for which it is grown. Uprooted straws to the number of about five dozen, the size of the compass of the two hands, are firmly tied together in little sheaves and stowed away in barns. After that the straw is again spread out to catch the heavy summer dews and to bleach in the sun. When the product has been sufficiently bleached it is put into small bundles and classified. The last step is to cut it close above the first joint from the top, when it is again tied up in small bundles containing about sixty stalks each and is then ready for the market. —Harper's Weekly.

The Languages of Paradise.
Every language has its admirers. In "Lullie" the author, Owen Meredith, maintained that when he heard French spoken as he approved he "found himself quietly falling in love." Edward Hutton is another instance of this linguistic fascination. In stating his preference in his enchanting "Cities of Spain" he recalls an interesting medieval legend. He says:
"And as I listened to the splendid syllables of the Castilian tongue that rang eloquently through the twilight I remembered the saying of that old Spanish doctor of whom James Howell tells us in his 'Instructions For Ferrante Trivelli'—to wit, that Spanish, Italian and French, these three daughters of the Latin language, were spoken in paradise; that God Almighty created the world in Spanish, the tempter persuaded Eve in Italian and Adam begged pardon in French."

Taste is Localized.
Taste is curiously localized in the mouth. Put a lump of sugar on the tip of your tongue and you will find it distinctly sweet. Then try it halfway back on the tongue and you will find it tasteless. All sweet or aromatic substances, such as wine, sugar and coffee, can be properly appreciated by the front half of the tongue, a piece of knowledge that every true connoisseur applies when he sips instead of taking a mouthful. With most other substances, however, the reverse is true. In these cases the tip of the tongue serves only for touching—it is the back part that tastes. The sides of the mouth, too, are quite insensible to certain substances not tasteless. Put some salt or vinegar between the teeth and the cheek and you will find them absolutely flavorless.—London Standard.

Wrestling For Rent.
In several cantons of Switzerland the custom prevails of holding wrestling matches and other exhibitions of physical strength at their church, gymnastic and rifle festivals. The champions taking part in these athletic sports belong to the most diverse ranks in the social scale. Thus at a recent festival at Grenchen, a little town in the canton of Soleure, a wealthy property owner and his tenant, a carpenter, stepped into the arena to wrestle according to the rules of the art. There were to be four rounds, or "falls." The stake for each "fall" was one quarter's rent. After the carpenter had thrown his landlord four times the victor's prize was awarded to him, and he accordingly found himself entitled to live in his house rent free for a whole year.

A Henpecked Astrologer.
Lilly, the astrologer and alchemist, could not see for himself sufficiently far into that future which he professed to be able to scan so clearly for others to guard him against making a fool of himself by marrying. He caught a vixen, "of the temper of Mars," to use his own words, and the fact that she brought him £500 as dowry did not count for much in the way of compensation, seeing that "she and her relations cost him £1,000."

Matrimonial Dyspepsia.
"Well, how do you like married life?" inquired the friend.
"Not at all," replied the man who had married money and was suffering for it. "I'm a case of matrimonial dyspepsia."
"Matrimonial dyspepsia?"
"Yes. She never agrees with me; she's too rich."

His Deduction.

"Now, Edgar," she said to a bright little fellow, "tell me who the first man was?"
"Henry Clay," was the prompt reply. —Chicago News.

As to Truth Telling.
There is an eastern saying which runs: "It is good to know the truth and to tell it. It may be better, knowing the truth, to talk of date stones." —London Truth.

Saved by His Wit.
Lord Justice Fitzgibbon, at the time when he was one of the justices of appeal in Tipperary county when a man was brought before him on indictment for murder. The case was proved that the victim came to his death by being hit with a stick in the hands of the defendant, but the doctor testified that he had what they called in medical parlance a "paper skull."
The case looked dark for the prisoner, or, however, and the jury returned a verdict of guilty. As the man was brought before the court for sentence it was noticed that his lordship had his black cap in his hand.
"Have you anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced upon you?" demanded Lord Fitzgibbon.
The man looked for a moment and then said, "No, your lordship, I have nothing to say, but I should like to ask one question."
"What is that, my man?" said Fitzgibbon.
"I should like to know what a man with a head like that was doing in Tipperary?"
The black cap was put away and a prison sentence imposed.

"It."
Joseph Chamberlain, the English statesman, was once indebted to a nursery rhyme for a great oratorical hit. In one of his speeches he was criticising Lord Beaconsfield and Lord Salisbury on their return from Berlin, where they had been carrying on negotiations with Bismarck. Both had made speeches explaining their actions, and one of them in the course of his oratory used the word "it" so many times as to give Mr. Chamberlain a chance in his reply to make one of those popular allusions which are remembered longer than any logic.
"What the honorable gentleman has said," he remarked, "reminds me of a rhyme I learned from my nurse:
"If all the seas were bread and cheese,
If all the lakes were currant cakes,
What should we have to drink?"
The effect on the audience was tremendous. No one ever forgot that "it."

Marriage Marts.
The famous Tunis marriage mart is held twice a year, in the spring and in the autumn. The Tunisian girls attend by the hundreds, each with her dowry in coin and jewelry disposed about her person. The "golden girls of maidenhood" encircle her waist, and in it is an unadorned dagger. When the dagger is gently removed by a passing gallant and presently returned, it means that a proposal has been made.
A prettier custom prevails among the Osman mads, who, at stated intervals, assemble in the market place. In front of each is a lighted lamp, an emblem of conjugal fidelity. A young man feels attracted and gently blows upon the flame, extinguishing it. When the girl lights it, it is a rejection; if she allows the lamp to go unlighted, however, the suitor is acceptable.

Wax Finishing.
In wax finishing hard woods use a paste filler and shellac varnish to get a good surface. Of course the wax may also be rubbed into the unfinished wood, but that gives you quite a different effect from the regular wax polish, says a correspondent of Wood Craft. With soft woods you first apply a stain, then apply a liquid filler or shellac, according to the quality of work to be done, the former for the cheaper job. The usual proportion of wax and turpentine is two parts of the former to one part of the latter, melting the wax first, then adding the spirits of turpentine. For reviving or polishing furniture you can add three or four times as much turpentine as wax, all these proportions to be by weight. To produce the desired egg-shell gloss rub vigorously with a brush of stiff bristles or wooden rag.
