miles across the desert from the site of the present Redmond to the nearest drop of drinking water. The transformation came with the construction of a large Carey Act reclamation project which, when completed, will reclaim a twenty-five-mile square area that formerly grew only sagebrush and junipers and whose chief life was jack rabbits, coyotes and wild horses.

The Redmond section illustrates the class of people that is settling many of the newly-reclaimed districts of the West. The pioneer and wife, the Redmonds, were former school teachers in North Dakota, who left good positions to "come West." The section was soon the reputed home of worn-down school-teachers and professional men. The old pioneers called them theoretical and bookish and said they got all of their "farming" from Department of Agriculture reports. Two years after the coming of the first settler Redmond held an agricultural fair, and the assembled products were marvels to the curious ones who came for miles. And the products of the Deschutes desert country have been surprising the state ever since.

Interestingly, the most profitable present product of the Redmond section is plain hay. Hay is so valuable that it does not pay to thresh, some of the farmers realizing from fifty to sixty dollars an acre from their best land. With the completion of the railway, other crops will be as profitable.

In the irrigated sections nearer Bend and Prineville market gardening and the production of berries and small fruits and potatoes have been good money makers. There are also large districts most promising for the production of the more hardy varieties of fruit.

Prineville.

Prineville, the oldest and the largest of the interior Eastern Oregon towns, is located eighteen miles east and up the rich Crooked River Valley, from the north-and-south railroads. In an earlier day the whole of Eastern Oregon was known as the Prineville country, and the town was the supply point for a great area. Prineville is a substantial, conservative town with splendid schools and some of the finest buildings in Eastern Oregon. Immediately surrounding are from 75,000 to 100,000 acres of agricultural land, the greater part of which may be irrigated by the construction of storage reservoirs to collect the waters of the Crooked River and smaller creeks. The hope of Prineville is an east-and-west railway, and such a road has been promised, following the 600,000-acre Wagon Road land grant up the Crooked River Valley past Prineville and east to the Idaho line. The road grant has lain dormant for years, a hindrance to development, but its colonization is one of the promises for the emancipation of Eastern Oregon.

Lumber and grain will afford the first railway traffic from Eastern Oregon. The lumbering industry will center about the towns of Klamath Falls, Lakeview, Crescent and Bend—and there is a large timber belt east of Prineville. In the center of the developed grain-producing area is Madras, the first joint railway station on the Hill and the Harriman lines after they leave the Deschutes River Canyon. Madras is also a new town. A few years ago the township was a popular "round-up" grounds for the "buckaroo" outfits that rode the surrounding range for cattle and horses. Today the land is producing from seventeen to thirty-five bushels of wheat to the acre and combined harvesters have replaced the former cook-wagons. Many of the farmers in this section haul water, but the "well on wheels" is only temporary, since water may be had at depths of from a hundred to two hundred feet.

The one big topic in the new Eastern Oregon is railroads, railroads, railroads. Every town has big railway dreams—even those that wouldn't at present be a before breakfast appetizer for a census enumerator. Every one of the present towns on the north-and-south line hopes and believes that it is to be the junction point for the new lines east-and-west across the state. Several of them openly talk of themselves as "the Spokane of Eastern Oregon." Some of them believe that they will be cities within a few years. And some of them will be.

which was saloon license paid in on December 31, which was $4,000, and $299 83 from other licenses. The second largest item was from fines, which totaled $661 75. There were 83 arrests made during the year, 45 of which were made by special officers.

The bond of C. E. Smith, city treasurer, for $2,000, was submitted with W. F. King and O. C. Hyde as sureties. The report of the recorder regarding the canvass of votes for city election was made, accepted and approved.

Bills allow by the council were as follows: A W. Yancy, salary, $75.00; Joe Kelson, salary and fees, $2.20; Prineville Review, $3.00; G. W. Noble, street work, $177.75; C. P. Butler, election work, $3.00; H. A. Foster, election work, $3.00; P. B. Howard, election work, $3.00; E. McLaughlin, election work, $3.00; J. Henderson, election work, $3.00; R. S. Price, $2.00; Crook County Journal, printing, ordinances, ballots, etc., $110.00; Mrs. Mallory, rent city hall, $25.00; R. W. Breece, recorder's fees, $21.15; O. E. Smith, treasurer's fees, $174.99.

Applications for liquor licenses were presented for Wiley & Quacklusch, Geo. W. Snodderly, C. A. King, Smith & Allingham, and Frank E. Brocius, all being accompanied by the city treasurer's receipt for $800 each. They were referred to the incoming council, with the recommendation that the license and judiciary committees of the new council act on the applications before they are approved by the council. This completed the old council's business and that body adjourned.

New City Council.

The new council then assumed control of the city, and Mayor Chas. S. Edwards announced his committees for the coming year. They are:

Finance committee—Winnek, Lippman and Yancy. Health and Police—Rosenberg, Ward and Winnek.

Judiciary—Ward, Noble and Lippman.

Fire and Water—Lippman, Rosenberg and Yancy.

License—Yancy, Noble and Rosenberg. Streets and Public Improvements—Noble, Ward and Winnek. The bond of Marshal Kelso with Ison Cleas and G. N. Clifton as sureties, was presented. R. W. Breece furnished as sureties, J. H. Gray and O. C. Hyde.

VULPINE SAGACITY.

The Tale of a Fox From the West Coast of Ireland.

It has often been said that the fox is the most cunning of all animals, but the following story of vulpine sagacity seems to require some credence. Some fishermen on the west coast of Ireland were in the habit of going to a small island a few hundred yards from the mainland in quest of bait. The island was inhabited by large numbers of rabbits and could be reached at low tide by wading, the water then being only a few inches deep. One morning they went in their boat quite early, it being high tide, and on landing saw what seemed to be a dead fox lying on the beach. The fur of the animal was all bedraggled, and he seemed to have been drowned. One of the men, remarking that his skin was worth something, pitched him into the boat. Proceeding to their nets, they returned to the mainland, and there the man who had possessed himself of the fox set him by the tail and flung him on shore. As soon as the animal struck the beach he picked himself up with considerable agility for a dead fox and shot off like a flash along the cliffs, while the men stood staring at one another in mute astonishment. The men concluded that he had crossed over to the island during the night when the tide was low in search of rabbits and, finding in the morning that he was cut off from the mainland, counterfeited death, with the expectation of thereby procuring a passage to the shore in the boat, an expectation which was fully realized.—London Globe.

A DOG IN THE SKY.

Tibetan Explanation of the Cause of an Eclipse.

Every one has heard of the Chinese myth explaining an eclipse and the enormous dragon that stalks through the sky seeking to devour the sun. But the Tibetan legend is a little different and very interesting as described by Sven Hedin in his "Trans-Himalaya." After describing the eclipse and the terror and depression with which it was received he says: "Then I visited Hhaje Tsering with the corner pillars of my caravan. He sat at his incensed table drinking tea and had his long Chinese pipe in his mouth. "Why is it that it has just been so dark?" I asked him. "The gods of the Dangrayumto are angry because you will not allow me to visit their lake."

"No, certainly not. A big dog roams about the sky and often covets the sun. But I and the lama Lotsang have prayed all the time before the altar and have burned joss sticks before the images of the gods. You have nothing to fear. The dog has passed on. "Very fine," I cried and made a desperate attempt to explain the phenomenon. Robert held up his saucer to represent the sun, and I took two rupees to represent the earth and moon crossing each other's orbit. Hhaje Tsering listened attentively to Muhamed Jai's translation of my demonstration, nodded approvingly and finally expressed his opinion that this might do very well for us, but that it did not suit Tibet.
