Bakowski Given Up for Lost

Klamath Falls Chronicle.
H. E. Momyer, Sr., expects to make another trip within a short time to Crater lake in the hopes of being able to find some further trace of B. B. Bakowski, the Bend photographer, who has been missing since early last winter.

The story of Bakowski's trip and the finding of his camp and supplies is well known to the readers of the Chronicle. He left here for Crater lake with a camping outfit with the object of getting some pictures of this natural wonder in winter when every thing was covered with snow. After leaving Fort Klamath and not returning at the time he told them there he would, men went out to look for him. They found his sled but no other trace. Upon their return to the Fort and making their report, Mr. Momyer, who has been connected with Superintendent Arant, of the Crater national park, in the absence of Mr. Asant started out to make a more thorough search. He went to Fort Klamath and there gathered three others to go with him. They went to the Government headquarters, where they camped the first night, making the trip on snowshoes. The following day they went to where the former party found the sled, but seeing no trace of him there went on the rim of the crater. There they found where Bakowski had been in the basement of the Crater Lake company and had left signs of having had a fire and melted snow in a bucket for water, possibly to prepare a meal. Here also were found two camera cases and some rolls of panoramic films. It was believed at the time these had been exposed and they were brought to the city in the hopes of finding where the photographer had been by having them developed. Upon submitting them to a local developing firm they found to not have been exposed.

Mr. Momyer and his party remained two days at the rim of the lake where the wind was blowing a gale, in the hopes that it would ease up so they could make some search for the missing man. They then came back down to where the sled was found and in prodding around this spot in the snow with a stick they bumped into the platform on which Bakowski had built his fire to cook his meals. Digging down to this they found where Bakowski had made a tunnel into the snow and following this back under some 20 odd feet of snow they found a dug-out, and in this were Bakowski's blankets, suitcase and all his supplies.

No further signs of the man himself were found. The place was left as found, and now it is Mr. Momyer's intention to get up there about the time he figures the snow has melted down to where it was when he left camp the last time in the hopes that traces of his snowshoe track can be found and tracked to where he met his fate.

That Bakowski is dead there is absolutely no doubt. Just how he met his fate is not known but Mr. Momyer, who knows conditions as well in the Crater lake park as any other man in the country, is firmly convinced that he met death by falling over the rim. He believes that the photographer took his cameras out of their cases and started out around the rim to get some views of the lake, and while trying to do this a sudden gust of wind caught him unawares and caused him to fall over the precipice. On the other hand, Mr. Momyer says there is a possibility that he started to go around what is known as Watchman's peak and a sudden storm came up with the air so full of snow that he lost his way and perished in the blizzard.

The best Mr. Momyer hopes for is to be able to catch traces of his tracks and follow them in the hopes of finding the body if it did not go into the lake. If this happened, it will not be found until the snow is gone, and it will be possible to get down to the water. Then the body may be found floating and it may not. If he perished in the snow above the rim, Mr. Momyer is determined to find the body before the snow goes off, and before it has thawed or any wild life has mutilated it, as will be the case after summer opens if it is not found before.

Mr. Momyer has been in correspondence with Miss MacKinzie of Spokane, whose name was found among the effects of the missing man. Miss MacKinzie states all that she knew about the young man was that he was sick in Spokane and she was the trained nurse who cared for him. In this way they became friends and had corresponded since. She says she tried to talk to him several times about his people and he would always change the subject.

THE RIDDLE OF CANCER.

New Theories About the Disease and the Search For a Cure.

More has been learned about cancer during the last ten years than during the previous ten centuries, which is only another way of saying during the entire history of medicine. It has been negative, it is true, but the work of elimination has now been completed. We are at last on the right track.

One after another of the old theories of its origin has been eliminated. It has been suggested that it is caused by eating fish or flesh or tomatoes or cheese, or what not. But facts do not support any of these theories. It was once supposed to be a white man's disease and not to be found among the uncivilized. That is now known not to be the case. It is found among all races, to a less degree among the uncivilized, but nevertheless among them. All vertebrates are subject to it. It is not now thought to be hereditary, congenital or ordinarily communicable.

What, then, is it? By careful study of infected mice and rats the theory has been evolved that cancer is due to independent cellular activity. Cancer is not something that comes into the body from the outside. It is something which grows up from the inside. It is as though certain cells of the body grew up and went wrong, as though certain soldiers in the army turned traitors and fought their own brothers. Why this is so we do not yet know.

There has been found in some animals a natural immunity from cancer, and that immunity can be artificially induced. This immunity is either active or passive. The Crocker fund has found it possible to immunize animals by injections of killed cancer cells prepared in such a manner as to leave intact the active substances. Moreover, cases of spontaneous recovery of human patients are known to exist. Why did they recover? They can only be accounted for if such a thing as immunity does really exist. The problem is to find out what this immunity is and how to produce it. Its existence is certain. Dr. Ehrlich, for instance, has done much in the study of artificially produced immunity from cancer in small animals. He has found that if mice are inoculated with an inactive strain of cancer they throw it off, and later if an active cancer strain is inoculated they have acquired immunity from it.

Almost any time now one may hear that some one has at last read this riddle of cancer.—Metropolitan Magazine.

The Hoop Pole Man.

The Maine hoop pole man makes even better wages than his brother, the gum picker. The hoop pole man follows along the wake of the loggers. He barbers the face of the hillside of stuff that no one else wants. He is after the second growth, as the young birch and ash are called which spring up around the rotting stumps of great trees. The hoop pole man takes a horse with him on his tours. He cuts the poles and the horse hauls them to camp by daylight. Evenings the pole man fashions the hoops with a draw-shave, sitting beside a roaring fire and pulling at his black pipe. Sometimes the poles are sold round, but the harvester who trims his own stuff and shaves the hoops receives 2 or 3 cents each for the finished product, and that pays.—Belfast Republican Journal.

Paper Clothes.

Paper dressing gowns, bath robes and similar articles of attire are now being turned out by the carload in England, France, Germany and other European countries. The paper whereof they are made is of the "blotter" variety and after being treated by a new process is dyed in various colors or printed with a pretty floral design.—Chicago Journal.
