

Raise Hogs.

Acknowledgement of the receipt of the booklet hog-raising issued recently by the traffic department of the Harriman lines in Oregon, has been made by farmers and stockgrowers in various parts of the Northwest, many of them expressing their intentions to take the advice contained therein and embark in the business of swine-breeding for profit.

It is the intent of R. B. Miller, traffic manager of the Harriman lines, of D. O. Lively, manager of the Portland Union Stockyards, and of others in Portland to make hog-raising one of the leading industries of the Northwest, in the hope of removing the necessity of importing live hogs from the Middle Western States for slaughter at local packing plants.

Publication of this booklet is but the beginning of a concerted movement to encourage farmers to take up swine-raising. The profits to be derived from it have been pointed out in various ways both by theoretical analysis and by practical demonstration.

The new booklet is intended for the experienced stockgrowers and for the novice. It is filled with common sense advice expressed in a style that can be understood by anyone of ordinary intelligence. It contained both the practical information and the expert advice written in a readable way.

Pendleton Farmer Pleased.
"It's a farmer book in farmers' lingo," declared a correspondent in expressing his thanks for a copy.

Even the women are interested. Lillian Moore, of Trochet, Wash., wrote to Mr. Miller yesterday, saying: "It is surely a great benefit to those interested in the raising of hogs."

Dr. James Whitcombe, director of the Oregon experiment station and instructor in swine husbandry at the State Agricultural College, writes: "This publication should be of much value to the Northwest and instill great interest in hog production."

S. M. Stone, of Hood River, says he is much indebted to the authors of the booklet. "It looks good," he says, "and I intend starting in the business right away."

C. H. Ede, cashier of a bank at Winona, Wash., requests that two or three dozen copies be sent him for distribution among the farmers of the community.

Walla Walla Extolls It.
S. M. Brown, publicity manager of the Walla Walla Commercial Club, declares it to be the most helpful piece of literature that has been issued in connection with the extensive advertising campaigns conducted by the communities of the Northwest.

"This seems to me to be the most practical publication I have ever seen on any industrial pursuit," writes H. P. Jones, secretary of the North Yakima Commercial Club.

Scott Henderson, secretary of the Kennewick, Wash., Commercial Club, says the farmers of his community are deeply interested in the subject and predicts that many of them will engage in "this selected industry."

D. M. Finch, superintendent of the Camas Prairie Railroad, advises that it is so good that he wants to go into the hog-raising business.

"With a little capital and this book," he declares, "I could get rich."

Already 15,000 copies of the pamphlet have been distributed to farmers on the O. W. R. & N. lines and to inquirers in various parts of the country.

The first issue consisted of 25,000 copies and the remaining 10,000 copies will be sent to persons whose names are being obtained by railroad agents, newspapers, farmers' unions and Commercial Clubs in various parts of the Northwest.—Oregonian.
