

Lawn Fete at the Rice Home

Mrs. Fred A. Rice and daughter, Edith, of Portland, assisted by Mesdames Brink, Pollard and Adams, entertained about forty guests in honor of Mr. Grant B. Freer of Seattle, to a lawn fete Tuesday evening at their home on First street. The lawn was decorated with Japanese lanterns strung on wires among the trees and below were tables and chairs scattered about for the convenience of the guests.

The evening's festivities started with a game of amateur drawing from which the fortune of the artist was read by prophetess, Miss Edna Morse, which afforded considerable amusement. This was followed by a very lively dance, the Virginia Reel, with a harmonica accompaniment, then, to the sweet strains of music furnished by several members of the Luckey Orchestra, the guests indulged in dancing on the green—the two-step, waltz and the rustic barn dance. After the dancing several very pleasing solos were rendered by Miss Lorene Winnek, Mrs. Oliver Adams and Miss Nellie Summers. Refreshments were served after the musical program. A game of two and chorus singing followed, when the guests departed to their respective homes.

Claim Unjust Treatment

Editor Journal: Feeling sure that you will be willing to allow a little space to those who have been unjustly treated, we ask you to publish our few remarks.

Last Thursday night a company of ten amateurs presented in Prineville a play which was got up here by the Royal Neighbors of America lodge and to whom we donated the entire proceeds here. The audience seemed to appreciate the performance and the orchestra furnished excellent music for the occasion. But as we were from Bend, the city council of Prineville attempted what we consider a "holdup" game. If the council knew that the show was to be given there, it knew from the advertising of it that we were an amateur company and were acting for charity. [See first page of Journal of July 27]. The council also knew that Prineville amateurs had only a few weeks before given "Down in Dixie" and that no license fee had ever been asked for in that case.

But what did they do? If the city marshal is to be believed (and he appeared to be a gentleman), the council instructed him to collect a $5 license fee from the Bend company. We did not care about the $5, but the principle involved. Why was this? Just because we were from Bend, wasn't it? Furthermore, no demand was made for this money until the curtain was ready to rise. Why was nothing said to the manager Thursday afternoon, for he could have been easily found at the Hotel Prineville or the Commercial Club Hall? No, they wanted to embarrass us as much as possible.

Again on Friday morning when the matter was taken up with the city attorney, who said the mayor and city recorder were out of town, we were shown no ordinance providing that amateur companies obtain a license, until repeated demands were made for the same. Then an old ordinance that was marked "Repealed" was dug up, and finally the real show ordinance. The last paragraph of this reads, in effect: "Nothing in this ordinance shall be construed to apply to amateur [spelled in the ordinance "amiture"] theatrical productions or performances given by educational or charitable institutions."

This was so plain that anyone who could read knew there was absolutely no ground for demanding further that we pay a license fee. Yet we had to show, as we did by reference to your estimable paper, that we were absolutely exempt.

Our company was composed of ladies and gentlemen, representative people of this community, and we regard the treatment in this matter as outrageous. Mr. Editor, do you think that Prineville should expect Bend people, after such conduct as this by Prineville officials, to flock to the county fair or any similar affair there? What assurance will we have that we will be treated as ladies and gentlemen and not threatened with arrest for absolutely no cause whatever, and humiliated in other ways?

McKenzie Merry Makers

McKenzie's Merry Makers opened an engagement at the Commercial Club last Saturday night, presenting "The Man of the Hour," one of New York's latest successes. This company numbers ten people, each of whom is an artist in his or her line. They all do specialties which are put on between acts, making a continuous performance from the rise of the curtain until the final fall on the last act.

Monday night Van, the Virginian, was presented, Tuesday night "Merely, Mary Ann," Wednesday night "A Life For a Life." Good audiences have been in attendance and the company grows more popular with each performance.

Tonight they present "Was She to Blame." There will be new specialties between acts as has been the rule each succeeding night. Between acts three and four tonight Mr. McKenzie will present to the lucky lady or gentleman holding the winning number, a real live baby. Be sure and be there. You may win it.

Friday night they present America's latest and greatest play, "St. Elmo," Augusta J. Evans' widely read novel, dramatized by Marie Hayward. All lovers of real drama should not fail to see the great play.

Saturday afternoon there will be a bargain matinee on which occasion they present the Tom Sawyer version of "Peck's Bad Boy." Prices 15 and 25 cents all over the house.

Saturday night the exorcisingly funny comedy, "The Man in Black," in three acts. A scream—a roar—a yell.

Sunday afternoon—"East Lynne"—15 and 25 cents will be the prices.

Sunday night—"Ten Nights in a Barroom," which will be the last play presented by the company here this season as they leave Monday morning for Bend, Redmond and Madras. From there they go on their annual tour of Idaho, Utah and Colorado.

Mr. McKenzie, the genial manager, deserves great credit for carrying a company who know their business, both on and off the stage.

TUMULT IN A THEATER.

The "Old Prices" Riots at Covent Garden, in London.

On Sept. 18, 1809, Covent Garden theater, London, which had been totally destroyed by fire just one year previous and had been rebuilt, opened under the management of John Philip Kemble. The prices on account of the great cost of the building, which, by the way, was nearly $800,000, were raised, and this led to the celebrated O. P. riots.

On the opening night cries of "Old prices!" came from every part of the house, and this continued nightly, augmented by rattles, drums and whistles, until on the 23d Mr. Kemble appeared before the curtain and said that a committee of gentlemen had undertaken to examine the finances of the concern and that until they were prepared with their report the theater would be closed. "Name them!" was shouted from all sides. Their names were declared. "All shareholders!" cried a wag from the gallery.

In a few days the theater was reopened, and the tumult was renewed and continued several weeks.

Quoting from a London newspaper dated Dec. 7, 1809: "The row was kept up last night in a most uproarious style. It began early in the evening, and very little of 'The Man of the World' was heard. The O. P.'s were very numerous both in the pit and the boxes. In the former they sported their sprigs of laurel and their initials (O. P.).

"Two horns, two watchmen's rattles and three or four whistles formed the instrumental part of the concert before the curtain and kept up a most melodious din. The O. P.'s repeatedly performed their dance in a most spirited manner. They had complete possession of the center of the pit and amused themselves with mock fights and scampering over the benches.

"Several placards were displayed. One of them was inscribed 'What do you want?' and the other side, which was turned round by way of answer, had on it 'Old prices.' The curtain was dropped a few minutes before 10. 'God Save the King' was then sung in the pit, and a grand O. P. dance was two or three times repeated. Three cheers were given for a British jury, and after giving their usual cheers and groans the O. P.'s left in a body, and the house was closed before 11."

Songs were written, and one of them, "Heigh-ho, Says Kemble," was sung under Mr. Kemble's windows. At last Kemble was obliged to give way, and after a humble apology, which was graciously received by a crowded house, peace and the "old prices" were restored. From that time on Covent Garden enjoyed great prosperity.—Mr. Wallack in New York Post.
