Important Move

Toward Development

Two important moves relative to reclamation and irrigation development of the state are promised in the next few weeks. One of these will be a meeting between the Desert Land Board, the Central Oregon Development Company and the settlers on that company's lands to straighten out difficulties and listen to complaints. The other will be a showdown on the Columbia Southern project. The Oregon-Washington-Idaho Finance Company, which has undertaken to take over the Columbia Southern project, has until November 1 to do so, or the contract will be canceled.

Numerous complaints have been received relative to the Central Oregon Development Company. This company took over the old Deschutes Irrigation & Power Company's defunct project near Bend, and has been continuing the work, but from the nature of the complaints the company's handling of the project has not been altogether satisfactory.

Among other things a settler was arrested for breaking a headgate. The settler said that he could not get enough water, and took summary means to secure the water. His case was dismissed. Others settlers are complaining that water is insufficient, that the company is not taking proper steps for the construction of the north canal, as provided for in a supplemental contract, and additional complaints of varied nature are being heard.

The meeting will be held to hear all sides of the story, and some members take the attitude that if all of the settlers' complaints are true, drastic measures should follow to aid the settlers.

The Columbia Southern project has been hanging fire for years and has gone through many trials and tribulations. It is probable if nothing is accomplished by November 1 that the Board will immediately cancel all contracts and refuse further to allow companies to take steps unless they can absolutely show that there is sufficient money in sight to finish the work on it.

Under the proposed plan of the Oregon-Washington-Idaho Finance Company, that company desires a lien of $60 an acre, but agrees to reduce the lien to old settlers coming in under the new contract to $50 an acre. Then the company desires to reimburse all former contract holders not actually settlers. In order to raise the amount necessary the plan is to furnish old contract holders preferred stock in lieu of cash, and about half of these holders have accepted on these terms. If the company can succeed in handling this end of the plan, it believes, according to a statement of the Board, it will be able to finance the balance of the plan through the sale of additional lands.

This project embraces 27,000 acres in Crook county on the west side of the Deschutes river, near Laidlaw. The segregation was made on behalf of the Three Sisters Irrigation Company, which proposed to reclaim the lands from the regular flow of Tumalo creek. The contract between this company and the State Land Board was executed in December, 1902, and provided for a total lien of $277,000. This company subsequently assigned its interests to the Columbia Southern Irrigation Company, which in turn assigned its interests to the Columbia Southern Irrigation Company.

The company sold water rights for 17,929 acres in the segregation and 1360 acres outside. Before construction had advanced far it was discovered that the regular flow of the waters of Tumalo creek was sufficient for the irrigation of only about 2,000 acres. The water rights were sold at an average price of a little over $10 an acre.

The Board endeavored to have the company complete reclamation by a storage plan, but the company refused and a receiver was appointed for the company and the Attorney-General directed to bring suit for cancellation of the company's project. This suit was decided adversely to the state. Since then the Oregon-Washington-Idaho Finance Company obtained an option on the company's holdings and arrangements were made in a contract between this company and the Board for financing the plan. This expires November 1.

State News.

A step of permanent constructive benefit was taken last Saturday night at the Portland Commercial Club, when business men gathered at a dinner to discuss the benefits of recent excursions to Klamath Falls, Central Oregon and Aberdeen, Wash. The big dining room was filled by men of affairs and the experiences given and the policy outlined for future excursions were of great value. The meeting developed into a symposium on the attitude of Portland businessmen to outside territory in the two states and was a survey of conditions existing from Aberdeen to Klamath and in Central Oregon. The result will be a closer tie between Portland and the outlying country and this promises to be of great aid in future development.

Redmond will hold a potato show on November 2. This is the date the O. W. R. & N. demonstration train arrives at Redmond and the two events will undoubtedly bring a very large number of farmers from the surrounding country to Redmond. At the same time a meeting of dairymen will be held to organize an association.

An apple tree near Albany has been sold for $600. It is ever-bearing, maturing fruit at all seasons of the growing period, with buds, blossoms and apples on the tree at the same time. A nursery company has bought the tree and will try to establish a new ever-bearing variety.

Dairymen, butter and cheese makers will gather in Portland December 6, 7 and 8 for the annual convention and special plans are under way to make this year's gathering the largest and most interesting ever held. Experts from the East will be in attendance to judge the different exhibits, of which there will be many, and well known authorities on various topics of interest will deliver addresses. There will be more and better prizes offered than ever before.

Eugene will hold its biggest apple show on November 3 and 4, the coming exhibit throwing all previous shows far in the shade. The annual fruit exhibition is growing all the time in importance because of increasing orchard acreage around Eugene, and this year the festival will take on more than local interest. Prizes have been offered that make it an object for fruit growers to compete.

Lakeview will add agriculture to its high school course as soon as its new building is finished. This is a new and important feature of the course of study and one that progressive communities are adopting.

The University of Oregon, Eugene, will hold a competitive examination for two appointments to the Naval Academy at Annapolis on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, January 25, 26 and 27, 1912. The appointments are the patronage of Senator Chamberlain, who has agreed to appoint as cadets to the Naval Academy in May of 1912 the two candidates in the examinations who pass the best mental and physical tests. The examinations will be wholly competitive, and are open to any young man in the state who is a citizen of the United States.

In addition to an age qualification, and a strict physical test, applicants will be examined in the following subjects: Algebra, Plane Geometry, English Grammar, English Literature, English Composition, Geography and History, the latter including History of the United States, Ancient History, and History of Medieval Europe.

Candidates for the examination should send in their names to the President's Secretary, University of Oregon, Eugene, for registration.
