

The Scrap Book

Talked Just Like a Man.

Miss Florence Marryat, the novelist, daughter of Captain Marryat, had some mannerisms of her own. The following anecdote was told by William Downey: "Here is a letter from Florence Marryat," said Mr. Tinsley, the publisher, to me one morning. "She wants me to buy a new three volume novel from her. If I'm out of the way when she calls you can talk to her."

"I asked how I was to recognize her. 'You'll recognize her easy enough,' said Mr. Tinsley. 'She is a tall, striking looking woman, and she'll talk to you just like a man.' A few days later a tall lady called. I fancied she might be Miss Marryat. She looked around the office, and then, addressing me, she said, 'Is Hill in?'"

"To this I replied that Mr. Tinsley was not in. Could I do anything for her? 'I must see Bill himself,' she said. 'Tell the old bouncer I called.' 'You're Miss Marryat?' I ventured. 'Yes. But stop! How the dickens do you know I'm Miss Marryat? I never saw you before!'"

A Word and a Smile.

If I knew that a word of mine, A word not kind and true, Might leave its trace on a loved one's face I'd never speak harshly, would you?

If I knew that the light of a smile Might linger the whole day through And brighten some heart with a heavier part I wouldn't withhold it, would you?

He Was Paying Himself.

Tommy Deagen, soldier of fortune and distinctive character, worked for the trolley company in the old days—"the good old days," he called them, but that is largely his point of view. He had worked five or six days, and he had worked hard, as conductor. He liked the work, and he found it worth while. One day as he hopped off his car at the division office he saw a crowd of conductors standing around in an expectant attitude.

"What's this, boys—a strike?" he asked in surprise. "Nope," was the reply. "This is pay day. Didn't you know it?" "What?" faintly ejaculated Deagen. "Pay day, pay day! Does the company pay us too?"—Boston Record.

Their Two Medicines.

The native pharmacopoeia in Skye used to be of the simplest character. A man from the island, during his first week of night duty as a Glasgow constable, went into a chemist's shop and expressed frank astonishment at the bewildering array of bottles. "These medicines are forty numerous—yes, forty numerous indeed," "Yes, we have to keep a great many," the chemist said blandly. "Now, in Skye, where I come from," the constable went on, "the medicines are not what you might call numerous at all." "No?" said the chemist. "How many do you have?" "Just two. There is tar for the sheep and whisky for the people."

Breaking the Chain.

In 1881 a bill was introduced in the Massachusetts senate which provided for a bounty of $5 for the killing of "a lynx or wildcat." When the bill was under discussion Senator Rice of Essex, who had a habit of asking the committees to explain some parts of bills they had reported, said he would like to ask the committee who reported the bill whether the term "lynx or wildcat" referred to two different species of animals or whether it was the same kind of animal called by different names. Senator Rockwell of Pittsfield, who never let an opportunity to say a good thing pass, arose and said, "In the absence of the chairman of the committee who reported this bill I would say for the information of the honorable senator from Essex, who, having always lived in the eastern part of the state, is not probably aware that for years there has been a chain of wildcats running over the Berkshire hills, that the object of this bill is to take some of the links out of that chain."

Right to the Point.

John Sharp Williams says the best noninflaming speech he ever heard was made by Private John Allen, who used to be a member of the house from Mississippi. The man Allen wished to get on the ticket was an ex-Confederate soldier who had lost both legs and had a crippled arm. There were many things that could have been said about the man's war record, but Allen wished to be brief. He got up, looked at the fellow and brought the entire gathering to its feet by his speech. He said: "I desire to nominate all that's left of poor John Smith."—Philadelphia Ledger.

OLD POLES MADE NEW.

Metal Bases Installed Without Interruption of Service.

A new method of re-enforcing telephone, telegraph and electric service poles that have decayed at the ground line consists of sawing off the poles near the ground line, removing the old stump and building a new one in a steel tube, all of which may be accomplished without disturbing the wires or interrupting the service.

The tubes are seamless, made of three-sixteenths of quarter inch steel and are furnished in several sizes. The pole to be re-enforced is supported by a jack of special construction while it is being cut off at the ground line and then, through the manipulation of the jack, is shifted to one side while the old stump is removed and the tube buried in its place in the soil or in concrete.

The tube is then filled with concrete, or with soil if the latter is of a dry, gravelly or rocky quality, to about one foot below the ground line. Then a thin mixture of cement is poured in, and the end of the sawed off pole is slipped into the tube and forced downward into it. The pole, having been cut off and extending only about to the ground line in the tube, extends to the same height as before it was cut off. The thin mixture of cement or grout, forced upward by the insertion of the pole, fills all the chinks and crevices between the pole and upper portion of the tube, making the pole and tube practically one when it solidifies.

A pole carrying six crossarms was provided with a new base in less than an hour in one of the tests without disturbing the wires.—Popular Mechanics.

New Can Covering Machine.

Application has been made for a patent on a new machine for folding and sealing the lids on cans, recently invented by a Stavanger (Norway) mechanic. The machine differs from the ordinary lid folding machines in that it contains a metal plate with openings for four sardine or other fish cans. The cans, with lids laid on, are placed in these openings, and the plate is run through the machine, which automatically fastens and seals the lids on the cans. The only handwork necessary is the placing of the lid in position on the can and putting the can in the opening in the metal plate, which can be done by a boy, while a man of some skill and experience is required to operate the old machines, in which the can is placed in proper position in the machine and a lever pulled each time the lid is pressed on the can and sealed. The new machines, like the old ones, will be operated by electric power.

New Type of Block Signal.

A new type of automatic block signal which is being used on an interurban electric railway west of Cleveland, O., is believed to furnish a solution of the problem of operating block systems in cold weather. During the last winter the various railroads experienced considerable difficulty owing to the accumulation of ice and frost on the signal lamps. The lighting of the new signal is provided by a single twenty-five watt tungsten lamp supplied from the trolley through a resistance. A high speed one-tenth horsepower motor drives the mechanism, the motor being designed to operate safely through a wide variation of line voltage. Enough heat is furnished by the lamp and its resistance to prevent the accumulation of ice on the lenses and mechanism.

Bronzing Cast Iron.

A German paper gives the following process of bronzing cast iron without covering it with a metal: Thoroughly cleanse the metal and rub it smooth. Apply evenly a coat of sweet or olive oil and heat the iron, being careful that the temperature does not rise high enough to burn the oil. Just as the oil is about to decompose, the cast iron will absorb oxygen, and this forms upon the surface a brown oxide skin, which holds securely, and is so hard that it will admit of a hard polish, thus giving it the appearance of bronze.

Pigment of Egg Yolk.

Two German scientists have just isolated the yellow pigment from the yolk of the egg, the resultant being in the form of crystals. Investigations made into the chemical nature of this substance point to its being closely allied to the xanthophyll of withered leaves, which is formed from the chlorophyll. In this most important scientific study 8,000 hens' eggs were simultaneously treated, and these have yielded only sixty-two grains of pure pigment.

D. 1913, and if you fail so to answer, for the want thereof, the plaintiff will apply to the court for the relief demanded in the complaint herein.

That this suit has been brought for the foreclosure of a certain mortgage by reason of the default of the conditions thereof, said mortgage having been given by said Elizabeth Reed and Charles E. Reed, and duly signed, executed, acknowledged, witnessed and delivered by them to one H. J. Jorgensen, dated on December 17, 1910, to secure the payment of sixteen hundred dollars (\$1600.00) in accordance with the terms of one certain instrument in writing for that amount, to wit: a promissory note bearing date the 17th day of December, A. D. 1910, and made payable to said H. J. Jorgensen or order, with interest at the rate of ten per cent per annum, payable annually, from date, said note being due one year from December 17th, 1910, said mortgage designating and creating a lien therefor upon the southeast quarter (se $\frac{1}{4}$) of southwest quarter (sw $\frac{1}{4}$) of section four (4); east half (ea $\frac{1}{2}$) of northwest quarter (nw $\frac{1}{4}$) and southwest quarter (sw $\frac{1}{4}$) of northeast quarter (ne $\frac{1}{4}$) of section nine (9), township 18 south, range 12 E., W. That said note and mortgage were, thereafter, and on November 19, 1912, duly assigned and transferred by said H. J. That the said default consists in the failure of the said Elizabeth Reed and Charles E. Reed, or any of said defendants, to pay said indebtedness or any part thereof, and said indebtedness is still due and owing plaintiff and wholly unpaid.

That the subject of this suit is real property within the state of Oregon, and that the defendants, Milo B. Stone and Ella Stone, each has, or claims some interest or right in and to said mortgaged premises, but that plaintiff's mortgage lien is prior in date and superior in equity thereto. That the relief sought of the defendants, Milo B. Stone and Ella Stone, and each thereof, claiming interest or right in and to said mortgaged premises, if any they may have, be declared subsequent and inferior in equity to the claim, interest or right of the plaintiff herein.
