THE SIMPLE THUMB TACK.

Which Turns Out to Be, After All, Not So Simple as It Seems.

The thumb tack may seem to be a very simple thing, and so in fact it is, but at the same time there is more in the thumb tack than you might think. We are likely to consider the thumb tack merely as a short, sharp pointed tack with a flat smooth head that we buy at the stationer's with which to fasten down the blotter on our desk or writing table, and we may be familiar with only one sort, such as we always buy, but they are really made in hundreds of varieties, and when even at that there is not found just what is wanted they are sometimes made to order.

Thumb tacks are made of brass, of steel and with a German silver finish, and in these plain commonly used sorts they are made in various styles and sizes for various purposes, for thumb tacks are not only used in homes and offices to keep down a blotting pad, but they are used also by artists, engineers, architects, draftsmen and by many professional people who have occasion to keep papers of one sort and another spread out and secured.

And then there are thumb tacks with heads enameled in various colors, and such tacks as these are made not only of the appropriate color, but with the appropriate initial letter on them for colleges and schools. All these various sorts of thumb tacks are sold for their various more or less familiar uses on desks and tables, and these great numbers of colored thumb tacks are sold for various ornamental uses—in pinning up picture mats and curtains and in fastening up drapings and decorations in ballrooms and dining rooms and for various festive occasions. For all such uses thumb tacks may be found to match the decorations.

So when you come to ask about thumb tacks the response is very likely to be surprising. One New York concern in whose business they are a small item carries in stock a thousand gross of thumb tacks, this stock being kept constantly renewed. There are sold in the United States millions of thumb tacks annually.—New York Sun.

The "Story of the Cadillac" is one of that mechanical and commercial advancement which makes for permanency. The Cadillac Company has never yielded to clamor by producing that which catered merely to fancy, nor that which took advantage of the uninformed. On the contrary it has produced only that which it knew would give to the purchaser "value received" in abundant measure. The Cadillac Company has never been obliged to resort to exaggeration and over-drawn claims to dispose of all the cars that it could make—and more. Its policy has ever been to under-claim rather than over-claim. It is gratified that the public accepts its representations at their full worth; because the public has never been misled and because the public could always expect and has always received more than was offered.
