Paulina Has a Big Celebration

The celebration July 4th was a great success. By 9 o'clock of the morning of the 4th the crowds began to arrive from every direction. Wagons, buggies, carriages and autos were loaded with people out for all the enjoyment to be found.

By 11 o'clock when the literary program began, the building for their accommodation, was crowded to its fullest capacity, with about fifty people about the doors unable to get inside. The entertainment which was an impromptu affair, having been prepared the day of the 3rd, was well received.

K. Dean Huston, master of ceremonies, showed his familiarity with public affairs by the able manner in which he presided.

The boys and girls of Paulina deserve praise for their willing aid in all the literary and musical entertainment. Their songs, with Mrs. Homer York presiding at the organ, were sung with enthusiasm.

Paulina Notes

Paulina school district is very fortunate in securing the services of Prof. J. H. Dickinson of Wheeler county as teacher for the ensuing year. Mr. Dickinson comes highly recommended, both as a teacher of merit and as a great worker in church and Sunday School. While Paulina has always had a Sunday School since it has had a place as a small dot on the map, it has never been but for a short period each year. Both the residents of Paulina and surrounding country are interested in church work and we hope to see the Sunday School organized and become a permanent institution.

The Declaration of Independence was read by G. P. Lee.

A song by Wave Morgan and Nellie Roba was especially pleasing, while a vaudeville sketch by J. C. Christenson and M. Peterson brought down the house.

At the close of the exercises a call for three cheers for The Star Spangled Banner was responded to with such enthusiasm as to show that the spirit of independence is still as firm in all Americans as in the days of old. Long may the banner wave.

The dance given on the night of July 4th was one of the largest ever given in the Paulina hall. More than 100 people were dancing at one time. A good time was reported by all.

Roberts.

Arthur Queen and Mrs. De Armand were married in Prineville the first of the week.

Jones & Cross, of Dry Creek, got the contract for moving the school house. It will be a big improvement on the present location.

Who says the Roberts people can't show the community a good time. The 4th was an ideal day and there was a large crowd out. The bucking contest was good. The ball game was close and hot from beginning to end. The dance at night was a grand success, and the music good, which continued until 5 a. m. Everybody had a good time. The closing scene was the same as usual.

W. J. Linfoot's store is undergoing a general overhauling.

Carl Marion, of Laidlaw, visited with Jessie Beckman the Fourth.

The Wallace Smith place was the scene of a house-raising last Wednesday, when a dozen neighbor men gathered to assist Neighbor Smith in putting up his new house. Toward noon the women folks made their appearance on the scene with well filled lunch baskets and proceeded to set a long table that had been previously improvised in the shade of a large juniper tree. The table when laid looked most tempting and the hungry workmen did ample justice to the delicious viands provided by the good housewives. Pineapple sherbet and lemonade followed the more substantial diet, and when the time came to start work again some of the men were decidedly uncomfortable in the region of their waistbands. The walls of the house were raised and the rafters placed and all voted it a most enjoyable day well spent.

Going to Open Up the Dixie Meadow

Prairie City, Or.—The Dixie Meadows mine, which usually gives employment to about 200 men, which is now owned by an eastern syndicate, and which has been closed for a year or more, is in process of change of ownership, with the assurance that work will be actively resumed. The Dixie Meadows mine, located near Prairie City, has had a long and interesting history. Developed by local men and brought into paying condition, it was sold a few years ago to an eastern company for $75,000 cash. The new owners immediately began operations of development on a large scale, and after spending something like $200,000 developing what it thought to be one of the richest mines in this vicinity, suddenly ceased all work, closed the mine and sold all stores connected with the mine.

The prospect of the reopening of this mine will give a needed stimulus to several lines of business in the John Day valley.

Sheep Trails Changed by Railroad Steel

Portland Oregonian: "A great change in the routine of range life is noticeable in Central Oregon," says J. T. Hardy, traveling agent of the Oregon Trunk railway, who has just returned from a long trip in the interior.

"The change is due to the movement of great bands of sheep from their winter habitat to the mountain reserves by trains on the Oregon Trunk. Formerly, about this time of the year, the trails and roads toward the mountain preserves were dotted with rving flocks attended by the herders who always seem to lend to the Oregon mesas and canyons the final element of picturesque loneliness. They leisurely drove the sheep into the forest reserves for their summer forage, returning when the snow began to fall in September or October.

"That is as it used to be before the steel trail pierced the way up the Deschutes.

"Now, owing to the country settling up with homesteaders, the freedom of the wandering sheep is limited. Where the bands used to scatter on their way fences have been put up. Civilization is sprouting along the roadways. Even cultivated fields appear where there are no fences as yet. Hence the homesteaders can not stand for the herders sweeping over their occupied country with thousands of sheep consuming every sprig that comes from the earth.

"But the railroad solves this problem easily. Just now thousands of sheep for summer pasture are starting their pilgrimage from Coleman, on the Oregon Trunk, in what is generally known as the Shaniko district, to the Sisters country in the Cascades. Sheep are being loaded at Coleman at the rate of 3,500 to the trainload and dispatched to Bend. From this point they make the drive to the forest reserves near Sisters, about 75 miles, whereas the drive to pasture from the winter quarters in and about the Deschutes and Crooked River Canyons would be nearly 200 miles."
