FUN FOR HOLIDAY

Departure From the Usual Fourth of July Dinner.

PATRIOTIC OUTDOOR MEAL.

The Tricolor Scheme Carried Out In the Decorations and Edibles Something Unique in a Red, White and Blue Floral Centerpiece.

Drifting away from the stereotyped Independence day table, with its flags, let us consider one which was very pretty, inexpensive and out of the ordinary, where everything-decorations, favors and sweets was the work of the hostens and the patriotic spirit was strongly evinced by dainty red, white and blue in various ways, says Good Housekeeping Magazine. It was a famtly dinner, given on the top of a mountain, and more miles were between her and good things than the lady and the lemon Gail Hamilton told of.

So much had been done with flags and firecracker favors that she determined to be patriotic in a different way. In the center of the table was a low glass dish filled with blue ragged sailors massed in thickly; around the base was a close wrenth of snowy white geranium heads, and two inches of it was a second wreath formed of dark red geraniums laid on the leaves of the plant, the stems all turned in so as to make a green scal-loped edge for the red clusters to lie on. Of course the stems were all cut from the flowers to enable them to lie close and flat to the table.

Two candiesticks of pure white glass at each end of the table held colored candles, red at one end and blue at the other. The shades were pure white, and with a sharp pointed knife the hostess had cut tiny stars out of the paper and lined them with white tissue paper, through which the light shone

There were two plates of little leed cakes, all white, but one plate was an old india blue, and the other Japanese. with a deep red border. There dishes of dainty homemade candles. and at each plate was a favor-little bags of silk, filled with the ladies and shaving papers and penwipers for the gentlemen-so arranged scheme of red, white that the color and blue was followed and yet was not in evidence. The dinner was also patriotic. Cream of potato soup was of course white; lobster served in its own shell was red, and the entree, chicken creamed and browned, was served in blue ramekins. Ronst beef, mashed potatoes and stuffed eggplant in its own bluish skin helped to carry out the idea. The salad was tomate jelly served with white heads of lettuce. The dessert was quite an achieve-Between two platters were placed red, white and blue flowers, so that the stems went between the dishes and only the blossoms showed. On top were balls of rich vanilla ice cream and lemon ice. Coffee was served on the plazza, and there the children received the chocolate firecrackers they longed for. The favors illustrated are quite the newest thing in Fourth of July table souvenirs.

The Vogue of Sashes.

The vogue for sashes is pronounced, and the value of these, either neutral tinted or black, introduced as a desired note of contrast, is great. Some of the newest sashes are by no means simple of construction, for as many as four or five different colors are seen in one sash, as, for example, gold tissue for the center piped on either side with rose colored satin. This again is outlined with a narrow band of black satin and beyond this a still narrower one of emerald green, while the ends are embroidered with sliks and beads, introducing the colors named.

For Lingerie Waists.

Make buttonboles on both sides of a lingerie waist, but sew the buttons on a white tape and button them to the button side. When the waist goes to the laundress remove the buttons. The same tape of buttons can be used on

HINTS TO THE PACKER.

Much Tissue Paper Simplifies the Work Immensely.

Trunk packing is an art which few men and fewer men master. Perhaps the most important reason why it is a perennially difficult that for a woman is that clothes are constantly changing in shape and style. By the time a woman had learned to fold a plaited skirt scant skirts were in style. and by the time she had learned to pack those without wrinkles panulers and masses of drapery presented a different problem.

Much tissue paper simplifies the reblem of packing tenfold. Old paper is just as useful as new for this pur pose, so all the tissue paper that comes wrapped about hats, frocks or shoes ald be saved against packing day. Make long twisted rolls of it to put in the folds of waists and skirts, stuff loose little wads of it in bodices and sleeves and cover easily solled clothes generously with it to protect them from contact with other clothes or the side of the trunk.

Shoe cases of some kind are a neces sity to the packer, but they can be formed of folds of tissue paper if nothing more substantial is at hand. Canton flannel squares bound with tape and with a long strip of tape fastened in the middle of the square prove very convenient for shoe covers. The shoe are wrapped in the squares and field accurely with the tape. Shoe bars, too, are useful, a canton flanuel or linen bag for each shoe.

Many wrinkles disappear after a few hours hanging. Voile and almost all woolen materials lose their wrinkles if they are bung on hangers as soon as they are unpacked.

SUMMER LINGERIE.

Net Petticoats Are the Latest Novelties In Underwear.

It is well in these days of shifting fashion not to buy too many of any one garment at one time. It is always easy to replenish the wardrobe, and then one is sure of the latest model, for under wear cannot be made over, and to find oneself with a half dozen of anything quite new and yet quite out of date is distressing.

Among the more recent novelties are all net, unlined, shaped petticonts with underbodices matching. Some clever person has devised shoulder contrived from strings of pearls or of brilliants. The most striking novelty in tinting is found in the daffodil yellow lingerie. This is generally of chiffon rather than of crepe de chine, and in combination with it is used French valenciennes lace, pure white in color. Even nightrobes may be had of it. Some nightgowns made of the batiste or the nainsook have satin rosettes and bands of this color, and as many as twelve knots with lines of it connecting give a decidedly sunshiny, not to say jaunty, touch to its general appearance, particularly when one has been used to pink and blue or, at the extreme, the softest maize tone. Nothing like a little apron to add the last touch of perfection to the costume of the busy mistress of the new home, and the illustration shows a dainty model that might come under the head of "lingerie." This delightful apron is of lace and lawn, with bowknots of blue ribbon strings, which run through a lawn easing.

Sugar Taffy For the Children. Take two pounds of granulated sugar, one-half cupful of vinegar, one cupful of water, small piece of butter. Put these on to cook without stirring until this mitxure, when tried in cold water becomes hard.

Remove from the stove and place in a greased pan and add whatever kind of flavoring you wish. When cool enough to handle, pull.

You can make as much as forty-four sticks of taffy, which you can sell for a cent apiece. The sugar costs 11 cents, and the rest of the ingredients cost practically nothing, so the gain amounts to a nice sum.

For the Dishwasher.

Besides having a pot chain and scraper it is a good thing to have thick canvas cloths for the pots and pans and separate light cloths for the finer chinaware. Cake tins, pattypans and all small tinware boiled in a dispan in the water of which a handful of soda has been thrown will become fresh and clean and as bright as new.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

The Fiery Fourth of July Happily Passing.

LONGER FASHIONABLE.

Firecrackers and Pistols Regarded as Relics of Barbarism by Sensible People-Other Topics of Interest to Little People.

Playing with fire on Independence day is censing to be fashionable, and the flery Fourth will soon be a thing of the past. Doubtless firecrackers, pistols and other relics of barbarism will continue for a few more years to damage bumanity and property, but each year the lists of casualties, accidents and fires should continue to grow beautifully less until the "glorious" any other day not so glorious.

Young America celebrates the birthday of freedom in a much more sensible and agreeable fashion these days. Parades in costume, with flags and banners, are very popular; then there are picnics and excursions and carnivals, with songs and flowers, cake and ice cream, all much more enjoyable and interesting than fireworks and The two young patriots shown in the picture have the true spirit of Independence day. They pin their faith to the stars and stripes.

A Versatile Dog. In Tennessee a dog has been discovered that can mimic many sounds. It is a yellow mongrel, answers to the name of Bench and is very unprepossessing, except that in its eyes there are gleams of almost human intelli-

The dog's owner places him on a chair, and, making a sign, Bench gives an imitation of a Shanghal rooster crowing. Then without further com mand be follows it with the neigh of a horse, the lowing of cows, the grunts and squeals of pigs and other noises incident to farm life.

Of course the imitations are not so good as if made by a human being, but they are sufficiently accurate to be readlly recognized.

owner declares that nobody taught the dog and that his imitative powers were discovered by accident.

Cat and Mouse.

Two players, the cat and the mouse, are blindfolded and tied to a tree or post by two long strings. The mouse is given two pieces of wood, or a nutmeg grater and a piece of wood answers the purpose better. These the mouse grates together occasionally to give the cat a clew as to its whereabouts.

As both players are blindfolded, the cat is sometimes close beside the mouse when she hears the grating and can easily pounce upon her. When caught the mouse becomes a cat, and the cat joins the spectators, while a new mouse is chosen to take the mouse's place ..

Mighty Shadows.
Exaggerated shadows of immense tize are commonly seen in many places. On the Hartz mountains the so called Specter of the Brocken throws gigan tic shadows of mountain climbers into the sky, repeating every movement made by them. The same occurs on the summit of Pambamarca in Peru.

On the tops of Alpine peaks and on the summit of Ben Lomond in Scottand, mists in one case and rarefied air in the other, explain these optical delusions. The same causes also pro duce colored shadows.
