Seasick Remedies That One Would Not Expect to Cure.

RAW HAM AND BLACK BREAD.

When You Spill a Chocolate Sundae on Your Best Frock Here's a Way to Get the Stain Out—The Latest Fashion Fad.

Dear Elba—My thoughts this week have all been wending their way via the big steamships to "furrin lands," for really so many of my friends have deserted their native shores that very few are left on this side of the pond. Poor things! Several of them were, or, rather, are, experiencing their maiden trip, and they were very doubtful before sailing whether they would be persona grata at the court of Neptune.

You know, dear, how one's friends urge their own pet remedy for seasickness upon the tourist, but for some strange reason each one is as shy about the value of his offered cure as he is about his way of dancing the tango. And strange, too, his method is exactly the one you would not expect him to suggest.

For example, there is a social tradition among a certain smart set in New York that one of their members was cured of seasickness by living on raw ham, black bread and beer. As a result lots of would-be smart women have followed in the footsteps of this set of American aristocracy and, in the venacular of the day, have been sadly "left."

Another of the topsy turvy cures I've heard recently was for the victims of mal de mer to tie a tight band around their waists to steady their stomachs. Now, this is a real hardship to demand of a woman when in mode is encouraging a more than Venus de Milo expansion of waist proportion, so this is probably the most unusual thing that particular recomender could think of.

One of the most abstemious men I ever knew told me he overcame the terrors of seasickness by walking the deck with a bottle of champagne under each arm and was cured by this ungodly remedy. On the other hand, a sporting man will often suggest such mild remedies as lemons and ginger ale.

The thinnest girl I have ever encountered lived for five days on hard crackers and insists that they are the only things that saved her. Some people say you must drink no water, others that you must take no soup, and many old travelers advocate nothing but toast. So, dear, you see the most popular rule this season for the almost inevitable pond affliction seems to be to do the opposite of what you would on land, but the old and tried salt cure is that "there ain't no sich thing as a cure."

Dick has just come in and says he's heard the latest remedy a "sure tip." It's lime juice cordial. Put enough in cold water to make it taste pleasantly of the cordial and sip the beverage slowly the first thing upon awakening.

Before commencing this letter to you I was in the depths of despair concerning my best damask tablecloth, upon which a guest had spilled chocolate. You know what a wretched stain this beverage makes, and most remedies that are tried merely make bad worse. But where there's a will there's a way, and I've got hold of the chocolate—immediately in cool water, not hot water, and never use soap.

When, however, the injured article is silk or wool nothing I have learned is so efficacious as the following, which is a genuine discovery arrived at after much experimenting upon a chiffon blouse that had been rudely treated to a chocolate sundae: All you've got to do is to rub the spot with pure glycerin, taking care to rub it the way of the grain of the goods and not round and round, as this makes a larger spot, which is a mistake often made.

When the glycerin has been well applied then wash with lukewarm water the part that has been stained, rinsing several times until all grease has been effaced. Now iron on the wrong side and hang in the sun for a little while. At this season of soda it is well to make a mental note of this expedient, for it will save the cleaner's bill.

Now, before this chat comes to a weekly pause let's get in a little fashion gossip. Here in New York and at the resorts the mustard colored parasol is in evidence. Indeed, it's the whim of the hour among the exclusives, although it's the ugliest thing the mind of man could have conceived.

One cannot say, either, that the mustard colored parasol is cool looking, but it is especially smart with its long handle of carved black wood. Carried with a black costume, such a sunshade is very effective, though it has its pronounced limitations as far as pink, blue and lavender are concerned. The green parasol has been too much exploited by the masses, so unfurl your mustard sunshade and be in the swim, but don't go over your depth, for the sun "do" fade this particular color "woeful bad," believe yours devotedly, MABEL.

Ribbon Flowers on Parasols. Small bunches of black and white satin roses appear on the edge of one of the ribs and upon the handle of smart parasols. Medium large pink ribbon roses and foliage are arranged in wreath form around some parasols.

CHIC DINNER GOWN.

Light Blue and Black Net Effectively Used in This Costume.

Dining at restaurants or roof gardens is a pleasant pastime among stay at homes in large cities and towns. The costume pictured is designed for these occasions. It is of light blue crepe de chine, trimmed with pearl embroidery on black net.

The black hat and net shoulder drape which ends in a sash add the completing touch of emphasis.

Chiffon, mousseline de soie and various light, soft silks are used for these summery frocks. One very delightful example has a filmy lace bodice and sleeves, the bodice draped with graceful folds of the chiffon. At the top of the high giraffe in front where the drapey is fastened is placed a cluster of small white silk roses. Roses and loops of ribbon ornament the lower part of the skirt at the front, holding in place a draped band of the chiffon placed on the skirt about the knees.

NOVEL OMELETS.

Dainty Dishes For the Summer Luncheon or Breakfast.

Break three eggs in a bowl, add a little white pepper and salt, beat slightly, add two tablespoonfuls of cream, pour into a frying pan containing a tablespoonful of melted butter. With a broad bladed knife lift the cooked egg from all parts of the pan, letting the uncooked egg run down to be cooked.

As soon as all is set the omelet is ready to fold. Have a few spoonfuls of the tender tops of cooked asparagus heated in a small saucepan with a seasoning of salt, pepper and butter. Spread these over the omelet, fold it over and serve immediately very hot.

Apple Omelet.—Make an omelet as in the preceding recipe and when it is set spread over it a layer of apple sauce, fold it, turn it out on a hot dish and serve well sprinkled with powdered sugar.

Cheese Omelet.—Beat three eggs, add three tablespoonfuls of milk, a pinch of salt and one of pepper. Turn into a frying pan in which a tablespoonful of butter has been melted. When the omelet is set sprinkle it thickly with grated cheese, fold it in half, turn it out on a hot dish, sprinkle it with chopped parsley and grated cheese and place in a hot oven for the cheese to melt before serving.

A mushroom omelet may be made by frying a few thin sliced mushrooms in butter and spreading them, butter and all, over a plain omelet made as in the first recipe. Any vegetables—peas, celery, etc.—may be used as an omelet filling in the same way.

Orange Pudding.

The secret of making orange pudding which has no bitter taste is to make the pudding without heating the orange. Cook the pudding first and then beat in the oranges last. If a meringue cooked brown is wanted on top of the pudding beat the whites, stiffen them with sugar, use a teaspoonful and a half to each white so that the meringue will be unusually stiff, and drop it in big spoonfuls on a granite plate. Brown it in the oven, and when it is cold slip the meringue on the pudding. It is cooking which makes the orange bitter, and a pudding made in this way will be sweet.

Pastime For Children.

A sand pile in the back yard is a source of never ending pleasure. It will hold a child's interest longer if some colored marbles, shells, pebbles, etc., are mixed through it. Children should have play clothes. These little garments may consist of rompers or big aprons with short sleeves. There are many patterns for play clothes, and none of them are difficult to make.

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

Miss Mary Terry of Chicago weighs 600 pounds.

Mrs. Eleanor Wheeler of Chicago has celebrated her one hundredth birthday.

Mrs. William Foote, daughter of General Baldwin of Denver, was the first white child born on the Santa Fe trail.

Mrs. Rebecca Karp of Brooklyn for twenty-two years has sold newspapers for a living and has accumulated a fortune of $25,000 in the business.

Countess Lamsdorf of St. Petersburg claims to have attended 1,100 balls and to have danced steps equivalent to 15,000 miles. Thinks she has set a record.

Miss Kate Duffin is superintendent of the Confederate Woman's Home at Austin, Tex., and is also state president of the Daughters of the Confederacy. Miss Duffin is a brilliant lecturer of literary ability, and has been president of the Texas Woman's Press association.

Pen, Chisel and Brush.

G. K. Chesterton, the famous English writer, is still on the sunny side of forty.

Karl Theodore F. Bitter, who designed the Thomas Jefferson statue, as part of the Jefferson memorial, which has recently been dedicated in St. Louis to commemorate the statesman, and also the acquisition of the Louisiana Purchase, is a native of Vienna, but since 1899 has resided in this country.

Sir John Tenniel, the greatest of English political cartoonists, is now in his ninety-fourth year and despite his great age is in good health. He joined the staff of Punch in 1851, retiring in 1901. Though probably most widely known for his political cartoons, he won undying fame by illustrating the "Alice" books and "Lullaby Book."

Part Personals.

A physician states that Caruso has musical bones. He ought to have. He gets five of them from every person who buys a seat.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Wizard Edison's success makes him a pattern to emulate, but his habit of working twenty hours a day makes him a horrible example. So there you are!—Chicago News.

Now that women are to vote in Illinois Uncle Joe Cannon says, "It will be a good time for an awfully handsome man to run for office." Uncle Joe has not yet announced his candidacy.—New York World.

Poets Laureate.

Poets laureate, however, appear to be made and not born.—Omaha World-Herald.

A lot of England's poets are now trying to assume an air of nonchalant indifference.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

If Rudyard Kipling becomes poet laureate England will at least have an official poet whose stuff is read.—Detroit Free Press.

The poet laureateship is now vacant and England is understood to be looking around for some nice man who can't write very good poetry.—Ohio State Journal.

Fashion Frills.

Some critics seem to think that it is the province of the silk skirt to disclose the cloven hoof.—Chicago News.

Patience has embled Dr. Mary Walker to see the day when her walks of feminine attire are regarded as comparatively subdued and conservative.—Washington Star.

Indianapolis "ladies" have asked the police to see that "women" who wear split skirts also wear trimmings about their ankles. And the police have agreed to keep their eyes open.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Militant Suffragettes.

Woman's sphere in London is the bomb.—Columbia State.

In the old days England used to burn the witches, but now witches are trying to burn England.—Charleston News and Courier.

A retaliation league has been formed in England to attack the houses and properties of the suffragettes in retaliation for militant outrages. Wait for the big show!—Indianapolis News.

Timely Tips.

Signs of the times: Come on in, the water's fine.—Chicago Record-Herald.

The dancing teachers are seeking new steps. Let us hope they will find them. It's about time to shake the old ones.—New Orleans Picayune.

How to tell the flowers from the weeds: Pull them up by the roots. If they are flowers that will be the last of 'em, if weeds, only the beginning.—Chicago News.

Three Strikes.

Europe would be still more disquieted if it had two baseball pennants to worry about.—Chicago News.

"Is the race improving?" asks the Cincinnati Enquirer. Not to speak of according to Frank Chance.—Columbia State.

"Where are all the great men?" somebody asks. Well, Walter Johnson is with Washington, Ty Cobb stars with the Detroit and Hans Wagner plays the short field for Pittsburgh.—Toledo Blade.
