College Home for the Public School Girls

DEAR FRIENDS:—Here is our Cottage Boarding Home under a new name.

We are now ready to receive applications for senior girls attending the high school or for junior girls attending the grammar school. I, myself, promise each and every girl a warm loving welcome, a mother's care and a tutor's help as a university graduate. We hope to have French and German spoken in the home and free conversation classes in both languages. Pianos will be available and Miss Williams of Oberlin Conservatory will attend the college for music pupils. Healthy amusements and social evenings will be arranged for our students and their friends. The charges are merely to meet bare expenses. Prof. Myers says he is ready and willing to give our College Home his moral support. Students may enter the College Home under one of three propositions:

1. If students are willing to take their share in the general home work the charges are 75 cents per week for the Home accommodations with all its comforts and privileges. $2 per week for food.
2. If students do not wish to do any house work or are too young to do so, an extra charge of $2 per week will be made to pay another student to work for them.
3. Students can earn their own fees by working for juniors or extra payment students.

All students are required to supply bed, bedding, house linen, crockery for self, and one chair for common dining hall, and to conform to a few necessary home rules.

The success of the College Home depends, dear friends, upon your appreciation of our efforts on behalf of your girls.

Please send in applications for admittance to the College Home at once if possible or not later than September 1.

Address all letters to Mrs. Holloway, Prineville, or call and see me at Furniture Exchange, opposite Union Church, at 11:30 a. m. or 5 p. m.
Yours sincerely,
L. A. HOLLOWAY, M. A.

American Farmers May Profit by Experiences of European Nations

Corvallis, Ore., Aug. 18.—Although American farmers have better agricultural possibilities than those of any European nation, yet our crops are poorer than those of most European countries. This, at least, is the conclusion arrived at by Dr. Hector Macpherson, professor of political economy, Oregon Agricultural College, who has just returned from a tour of thirteen European states.

Dr. Macpherson is a member of the American commission, composed of delegates from each of thirty-five states and four Canadian provinces, appointed to investigate rural conditions in Europe. He gave out the following unofficial statement of his own personal observations and conclusions:
"So far as I have noticed there is not one European country that offers anything like the possibilities for agricultural production and happy rural homes that are to be found in America. Notwithstanding this, our crops are poorer, our methods of marketing more extravagant and our credit facilities more expensive than those of any European country. Likewise we are behind most of the European states in methods of rural education. On the other hand I feel certain that there exists nowhere in the old world a higher average of native ability than is to be found upon American farms. The average American farm home affords a higher degree of comfort and luxury than is to be found in the average farm homes of Europe. "The farmers of Europe were compelled to adopt scientific methods of farming and co-operative systems of marketing. Likewise they were forced to resort to co-operative institutions for a supply of credit. Small farmers had been reduced to the verge of starvation before co-operative methods were accepted. Once put into practice, however, these methods rescued the European farmer from abject poverty and placed him in a condition of prosperity. In America our prosperity has been the great obstacle to the adoption of scientific methods in farming and economical systems of finance and marketing. But we should not wait until driven by grim necessity; rather should we act from an intelligent desire to improve present conditions. When American farmers are as careful in their methods of cultivation and as thoroughly organized for marketing, insurance and finance as are the small farmers of Europe, American agriculture will have obtained a prosperity exceeding anything to be found in the old world."—Oregon Agricultural College.

Special Session of City Council

The city council met in special session Wednesday evening with the following officers in attendance: Mayor Clifton, Councilmen Ward, Gray, Shipp and Cooper; Lafollette absent.

In the absence of Recorder Bowman the mayor appointed H. A. Kelley to act as recorder.

In regular order of business an ordinance "designating the manner of construction of certain sidewalks and defining the width thereof on both the business and residence streets of the city of Prineville and to provide a punishment for the violation thereof," came up for third reading. The ordinance was amended by the addition of section 4 and adopted; ballot by call of roll.

An ordinance "adopting plans and specifications for Portland cement sidewalks" came up for first reading, and on third reading by title was adopted by roll call of ballot.

The council instructed the recorder to advertise for bids for the construction of 1667 lineal feet of curb, 16,500 square feet of five-inch concrete walk, 453 square feet of five-inch concrete roadway and 14 fifty-six foot stone crosswalks, to be completed before November 1, 1913.

City Marshal Coon was instructed to enforce the state law requiring the destruction of noxious weeds on streets and private and public property, and to cause to be published a notice to property owners to that effect.

The matter of filling or repairing the city cisterns was allowed to go over.

Council Adjourned.

How to Kill Jim Hill Mustard

"If all the jackrabbits of Oregon were confined to the Columbia river basin they would do less damage to the wheat fields than the tumbling mustard is now doing," says Professor Scudder, agronomist of the Oregon Agricultural College. "In many fields it reduces the yield one half and throughout the entire wheat belt it is rapidly growing worse. Farmers are beginning to count the cost per acre, and when put into dollars and cents it runs very high. Although he may not have realized it, the damage it does the wheat grower is the heaviest tax he has to pay. "This 'Jim Hill' mustard is a bad weed pest for these reasons: It is common throughout eastern Oregon. When ripe the head of the plant breaks off and blows for miles, while the tough pods open a little at every jump, dropping a few hundred or thousand seeds. A full grown normal plant bears about 1,500,000 seeds, which are covered with resistant seed coats and retain their vitality for 10 to 15 years, germinating only when brought near the surface. The plant is a very heavy feeder upon soil food and moisture and hastens soil depletion. And it makes harvest difficult and to some extent injures the feeding value of the crop. "In the work of eradication farmers should cooperate. Waste places should be clipped and burned before the seeds ripen. In draws and the lee of hills where it collects it should be burned. Fences that cross the direction of prevailing winds may have two wires strung on cleats nailed to the tops of the post, to help catch and hold the traveling weeds. Railway companies will be able to cooperate with the farmers, and clean their rights of way. Seed of grain crops should be entirely free of the mustard seed. Badly infested crops should be harvested with headers, as the combined harvesters scatter the weed seeds. "Following the harvest, the field should be thoroughly disced with the double-action type of machine that will best chop down the stubble and prepare a shallow seed bed in which the seeds will mostly sprout at the first rain fall. The young plants may be destroyed before winter by a second discing. In very foul ground another crop of weeds will come up in the following spring, and the discing should be repeated. Most of the seeds remaining in the ground will be brought up by the discing and may be effectually destroyed in the early summer plowing. This treatment will not only destroy the mustard, but most other weeds as well. It also saves the moisture and adds humus to the soil. "Another method of great value on dry farming lands is to seed a part of the farm to alfalfa in drill rows, three feet apart. The alfalfa may then be cultivated so thoroughly that at the end of the year the field will be entirely free from weeds of any kind. If the best strains of alfalfa are seeded the succeeding crop, harvested for seed, will be worth more than the wheat crop. At the end of three or four years the field for this crop may be moved to another section of the farm, until the entire farm is cleaned up.

"When the weed is first atacked in bad areas the iron sulphur spray should prove of great assistance. But nothing can take the place of cultivated crops or cultivated summer fallow in the extermination of weeds."

Work Progressing at Clear Lake
Geo. S. Edmondstone, chief engineer for the Oregon Electric Railway on their 45,000 horse power Hydro-Electric plant that is under development at Clear Lake, was in Sisters Saturday and states that development work is progressing at a very satisfactory rate and will be rushed ahead with additional help until the first of November or possibly later when it is expected to have the preliminary development work completed so as to be ready to start actual construction work as soon in the spring as men and supplies can be landed at the lake. Mr. Edmondstone expressed himself as being well pleased with Sisters as a mail and supply point and says the road from here to the lake is much better than he had expected to find it. The project now has its own team which puts them in a position to send out for a small load of supplies at any time. Mr. Edmondstone took in his family and a small load of supplies last Sunday and the first assistant engineer, C. O. Davolt, will be out this week after his family and more supplies. This means quite an addition to the revenue of Sisters and has already amounted to quite a sum.—Sisters Herald.

Spend Your Money Where You Make It

By HOLLAND.
MONEY that is kept in the community helps every one in that community. It is a part of the common fund on which any one with anything to sell—merchandise, labor, farm products—can draw. Money that is sent away from home is withdrawn from this common fund. It helps to impoverish the entire community. Send all the money away and all the people in the community would be "broke." The dollar that you spend with the local merchant will continue to circulate in the neighborhood, paying lawyer, doctor, blacksmith, carpenter, teacher. Ultimately it may return to you to be again started on its journey of purchase and payment. The dollar sent to the mail order house goes to swell the bank account of a concern in Chicago or New York. It is lost to your community forever. Your neighbor can't get it, and you will never see it again. Can't you see that self interest tells you to do your buying at home? Can't you see that it is the part of wisdom to spend your dollar where you are likely to get it again? The advertisements in this paper will aid you in deciding where to make your purchases. Only the more reliable merchants can afford to advertise continuously, and only the better grade of goods can stand such publicity. Visitor—Are you going to get a new hat? Congressman's Little Daughter—I don't know yet. Mama has passed the appropriation, but I'm awfully afraid papa will veto it. He is opposed to every bill we send in.—Brooklyn Citizen.
