As will be noted from this summary, out of the $8,000 received from Crook County and the two railroad companies, only a comparatively small amount (about $1,600) was spent for rental of the land and the actual farming work done on the two demonstration farms, at Metolius and Redmond, and a similarly small amount (about $1,000) for the equipment purchased for the work. The major share of the expenditures (a little over $6,000) was for the actual co-operative and advisory work carried on throughout the county by the agricultural expert in charge and his various assistants. These men spent the great majority of their time traveling from one section of the county to the next and from farm to farm, visiting and advising the men immediately on the land concerning their most pressing problems, writing hundreds of letters, holding many public meetings, exhibiting at the fairs, furnishing articles to the county press, supplying choice seed and crop-growing instructions to scores of co-operators, and in many other ways bringing the needed information directly to the people who called for it. The expenditures for the salaries of these men, for their traveling expenses, for the seeds distributed by them, and the many office expenses in sturred, postage, freight and express, advertising, etc., (as shown in the summary) indicate what the college considered the most effective method of reaching the farmer with the help he needed without loss of time.

So far as we were able to learn at the time that this work was being done, the leading farmers throughout the county as well as the business men and the county court itself, heartily approved of the way the work was being done and the results obtained.

All of those crops, by the way, which were grown on the demonstration farms as demonstrations of the proper methods of growing crops in that region, gave a very handsome return on the cost of the operation, in most cases averaging about 20 per cent net profit. There were on both farms, however, a number of small experimental rows and plots, and in some cases demonstration fields, which were grown just to show what methods should NOT be used, and those, of course, in most cases did not show a profit.

Now the college had planned to continue this work in Crook County over a period of two years, and the fund of $10,000 estimated as required to do this would have been ample for the purpose. However, no further funds than those noted above were received. Hence the second year's demonstration and advisory work was of necessity given up. A considerable amount of co-operative work throughout the county was carried on at long distance from Corvallis during 1913, but this, of course, could not take the place of the demonstration and actual field work.

A bulletin, by the way, giving the results of the demonstration work in Crook county and the Experiment Station work in Sherman and Harney counties, together with a discussion of tillage and cropping methods for Central Oregon is now practically ready for the printer and should be off the press in about a month. The bulletin will give in some detail report of the yields obtained from different crops and methods of farming tried out by the college in Crook county in 1912, and I believe will prove of interest to the farmers of that region, as few realize how much was accomplished in the six months of 1912, during which the college actively carried on the demonstration work.

Oregon Agricultural College.

Crook County High School Notes

Crook County High School closed the first month of the year's work Friday, the records showing one hundred and fourteen enrolled and all classes in good working order. Faculty and students alike are filled with interest and enthusiasm and the year promises to be the best in the school's history. The new departments are filled to their capacity and good practical results will reward the progressive enlargement of the school's curriculum. Under the efficient leadership of a real broad-minded school man, such as Superintendent Baughman is widely known to be, Crook County High School will become one of the leading educational institutions of the state.

In athletic work the year has begun very auspiciously, as two victories already crown the efforts of the football team. The game at Madras on Wednesday week resulted in 39 to 0 in favor of C. C. H. S. boys and at Fossil they won again, the score standing 13 to 0. Instructor H. E. Pratt has charge of the athletes this year, a fact that insures victory at each contest.

The English department will soon be ready to take up the work in classics and the classes are delighted as they enjoy mastering the richness of their mother tongue.

Superintendent Baughman and the high school board opened negotiations for the purpose of purchasing a moving picture machine to be used as one of the educational features of the school.

The two literary societies held their first meetings Wednesday and gave short interesting programs. The officers of these societies are as follows: Alphas—President, James Cram; secretary, Norris Bixby. Ochoconians—President, Elmer Thomas; secretary, Harry Stearns.

The high school realizing the importance of public speaking has entered the State Debating League and will soon begin work for the tryout. Some one will lose, of course, but it takes real men and women to stand defeat in the right way, and so the loser is often victor in spite of the judges' decision.

The League question for the Upper Columbia District is, Resolved, that a majority of all votes cast at the election should be required to pass an amendment to the State Constitution. The question is a live one of personal interest to all good Oregonians and those who wish to see the home team return with the victor's pennant should help furnish "points" that will work up into winning material when "sides" have been chosen.

The Election Next Tuesday

Five referred measures—two Oregon University appropriation bills, the sterilization act, the county attorney bill, the workmen's compensation act—will appear in the publicity pamphlet to be issued by Secretary of State Olcott for the special referendum election to be held November 4, under the Day bill.

One of the Oregon University bills makes an appropriation of $100,000 for the construction of a modern fire-proof administration building, and the other appropriates $75,000 for repairs and additions to buildings of the institution. Arguments against a reference of the two bills are presented by the board of regents of the school, Governor West, the Alumni Association and the People's Higher Educational League.

Petitions asking for their reference were filed by H. J. Parkinson, secretary of the Oregon Higher Educational Institutions Betterment League. Parkinson was the leader of the movement which two years ago brought about a reference of bills appropriating money for the university.

The petitions requesting that the sterilization act be referred were filed by Mrs. Lora C. Little, vice-president of the Anti-Sterilization League, of Portland, and the county attorney act petitions were led by J. E. Craib of Portland. Wilfred E. Farrell of Portland filed the petitions invoking the referendum on the workmen's compensation act.

The chief argument urged against the county attorney bill is that it allows the governor to appoint the county attorneys beyond the next election, it providing that those appointed shall hold until 1916. Those opposing the sterilization act declare that it is not a humane measure—that society cannot be reformed by the "butcher knife" and that it will increase instead of diminish crime. The main argument advanced in favor of a reference of the two appropriation bills for the university is that it ought to be consolidated with the Agricultural College and no further buildings ought to be erected until the people can vote on the question of consolidating the two at the next general election. Consolidation, say those opposing the reference of the bill, would not serve the best interests of the two schools of learning, nor the people at large, and is not feasible.

Besides the five measures above referred to the voters of Crook county will decide whether or not the county shall be bonded for $200,000 for the improvement of the highway extending from the north line of the county in a southerly direction through the towns of Madras, Metolius, Culver, Prineville, Redmond, Deschutes, Laidlaw, Bend and to the Klamath county line four miles south of La Pine.

Metolius precinct will vote on a "wet" or "dry" issue for that bi-annual election.

If you are in favor of any of these bills becoming a law, vote "Yes." If you are not in favor of a measure, vote "No."
