HOW TO USE A LIFE PRESERVER PROPERLY.

"The worst trouble about a life preserver," said an old sailor, "is that few people know what to do with one when it's thrown to them. Many a man would drown in trying to get a life preserver over his head."

"The average person struggling about in the water would try to lift up the big life ring and put it over his head. That only causes the man to sink deeper and take more water into his lungs."

"The proper way to approach a life preserver in the water is to take hold of the side nearest you and press upon it with all your weight. That causes the other side to fly up in the air and down over your head, 'ringing' you as neatly as a man ringing a cane at a country fair. After that the drowning man can be rescued."

GARDEN LORE.

How to Make Roses Bloom All Through the Summer.

Outdoor roses may be divided into four general classes—namely, climbers and ramblers, monthlies, teas and hybrid teas and hardy perennials.

The climbers and ramblers bloom only once each year, in late June or July, except a very few, among which are the new flower of Fairfield, also called the ever blooming crimson rambler; climbing American Beauty and Christine Wright, a bright wild rose pink in color. The dwarf or bushy ramblers with proper treatment bloom throughout the summer and autumn, as do also the monthlies, teas and hybrid teas.

The hardy perennials give a heavy crop of blooms in June and under skillful handling will give several more small crops of blooms during the season. The name perpetual given to this class of roses is misleading and means not that this class of roses blooms all the season normally, but that they live year after year out of doors.

In order to secure the greatest number of blooms from rosebushes of any class the first step is to cut the rose blooms and summer prune the bushes properly. The bloom always appear on the young growth and in picking either a single rose or a cluster of roses, as in the case of the bushy ramblers and other cluster roses, cut with a sharp knife, taking with the bloom or cluster of blooms a stem long enough so as to leave a stub having only one leaf between its end and the old hardwood branch or main stalk of the bush.

The second plan in securing more or less continuous summer blooming in roses is the weekly working of the surface of the soil about the rosebushes and monthly fertilization of the soil. Work the surface of the soil at least once a week so as to leave it fine and soft to the depth of two or three inches. The drier the weather the oftener the soil should be worked, and if this is done there will be very little need for artificial watering.

About once a month work into the soil all over the rose bed or border or where the bushes are set as single specimens in a circle about two and one-half feet in diameter around the bush a layer of well decayed cow or sheep manure about one inch thick. This may be varied by a spread of bonemeal in the place of the manure thick enough to make the surface quite white and worked in the same as manure. Both kinds of manure and bonemeal can be obtained from the seedsmen.

How to Save Ice.

"I wish to tell you of a contrivance of mine," said a woman recently, "for saving ice when the refrigerator has to stand in a heated kitchen or when hot weather comes around. Even though the refrigerator is in a cool place in summer, the ice melts fast during the heated term. I learned the trick during a torrid summer and wish to pass it on for the benefit of others."

"When the ice man came around with a hundred pound piece of ice I had him put it inside a gunny sack, and after three days of intense heat I had about fifteen pounds left when the ice man came with another hundred pounds and put it inside a dry sack. The butter had kept hard and sweet, so I infer that the refrigeration was sufficient even if the chill was less than when rapid melting was going on."

How to Make Nut and Date Bread.

A bread that will appeal to the vegetarian is made by the following recipe: Measure one cupful of warm wheat wash made from any kind of wheat preparation, add one-quarter cupful of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt, two of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of melted butter and one-quarter yeast cake dissolved in four tablespoonfuls of lukewarm water. Stir together, add one cupful of finely cut walnut meats and three-quarters cupful of dates cut in small pieces. Mix in flour enough to make a dough that can be kneaded, cover and set in a warm place to rise overnight. Knead, shape into a loaf and let rise in the pan. Bake in a moderate oven.

How to Make Glass Tough.

Tumblers, wineglasses, lamp chimneys and other glasses may be rendered so durable as to be almost unbreakable by placing them in a saucepan of cold water and gradually bringing it to boiling heat. Care should be taken that they do not touch each other during the bubbling up of the liquid.

RED TAPE AND A TUB.

A Bath in Senegal Was Something Like a Surgical Operation.

Some years ago, when the capital of the French colony of Senegal was a dull, unprogressive town where officialism and red tape prevailed, a French traveler, with a friend, had a most amusing experience when he wished to obtain a bath. There was no bathing establishment in the capital of Senegal at the time, but rumor had it that it was possible to purchase baths at the hospital.

Accordingly the travelers repaired to the hospital, where they stated the purpose of their visit.

"Certainly," said the official, "take seats. Your names, surnames and birthplace?"

"But we merely want a bath."

"Exactly. What is your name, and where and when were you born, and are you government servants, soldiers or officers? No? Well, the rules do not provide for this. Just a moment. I will read them again. Yes, here is your case. You must first make out on stamped paper an application to the governor of the colony. After favorable notice from the governor you send another application to the chief colonial doctor, who will send for you and examine you."

"But we are not ill."

"It is the rule. Having examined you, the doctor will give you two non-commissioned officers' bath tickets, to be delivered to the assistant doctor."

"Why the non-commissioned officers' bath?"

"For the reason that in our accounts we recognize only two categories of persons—officers and civil servants, the latter talking rank with officers or petty officers. You are not official at all if officers were to find you in their baths they would probably make a row."

"What period of time will all these formalities consume?"

"Two or three days, provided your application is approved at the government house."—Chicago Record Herald.

Present Troubles.

"Ah, pretty lady," said the fortune teller, "you wish to be told about your future husband?"

"Not much," replied Mrs. Galley. "I've come to learn where my present husband is when he's absent."—Philadelphia Press.

Turning the Phrase.

"They used to call him a bonehead." "That was before he succeeded." "Yes. Now they express it differently. They call him a man of hard, solid sense."—Washington Star.

Distantly Related.

"Say, isn't Swardie, the banker, a relative of yours?" "Yes; he's a cousin—about $4,000,000 removed."—Chicago Tribune.
