

Columbia Semi-Malleable Range

In the Columbia Range, we believe we are offering one of the very best and most attractive ranges made. It's a sanitary range. No place for dirt and scrubbing water to lodge year after year until the dirtiest place in the house is under the kitchen range, as is the case with all ranges running to the floor. It is a handy range, too. The polished top makes it easy to clean. The lift-up plate in front makes it handy to empty trash, etc. The damper handle in front is always cool. We are selling these ranges at a very low figure considering quality and will put them out on the easy payment plan.

Powell Butte

S. D. Mustard lost a nice Holstein heifer last week, the result of eating too many potatoes. This heifer was one of a bunch of seven well bred Holsteins which Mr. Mustard bought last year and which together with several fine cows owned by him are destined to become the starter of the future Mustard dairy herd.

The time of meeting for the Sunday school at the Wilson school-house has been changed to 10:30 a. m.

J. A. Riggs sold a load of dressed pork to the Redmond market Friday.

Price of hay has taken a decided jump in our section. Heretofore, the price has been $8 with an occasional $7 seller. Now all are asking $10 and some holding off for $12 in the stack. The price depends largely upon how badly the farmer wants to sell.

January weather which permits of hauling potatoes a distance of 10 or 12 miles isn't enjoyed by every state in the union.

J. E. Stewart and J. W. Carlson, two prominent business men of Prineville, were in this locality Sunday looking at some land with a view of investing.

C. C. Montgomery, Geo. Braze, Reeves Wilcoxen and Chris Seitz are Powell Butte men who loaded out hogs for the Portland market Monday.

Geo. Hobbs is hauling oats to the Redmond school.

Patrons of school district No. 90 are unanimous in their thanks to the Central Oregon Irrigation Co. for their donation of $25, which will be applied on the school debt incurred by the building of the new school house.

Notice of Final Settlement

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, the administrator, with the will annexed of the estate of Ida Wright, deceased, to all persons interested in said estate that he has made and filed with the clerk of the county court his final accounting of his administration of said estate and that the court has set Monday, the 6th day of April, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at the county court room in Prineville, Oregon, as the time and place for hearing and settling said final accounting. At which said time and place any person interested in said estate may appear and object to said final accounting.

You Can Depend On Your Neighbors

By HOLLAND.

TO whom do you appeal for help in time of trouble or sickness? On whom would you depend if dread misfortune laid its heavy hand on you? Your neighbors? Exactly.

Man is a gregarious animal, and he naturally cares for relatives, friends and acquaintances rather than strangers. Social affairs depend entirely on acquaintanceship, and business affairs are controlled to large extent by the same element. It would be better if business and friendship were still more closely linked.

If you would depend on your neighbors in time of adversity why not depend on them in prosperity? Isn't the man whose hand you would like to grasp the man to whom you ought to hand the dollar that you have to spend? Why send it away to a mail order house which would be interested in a death in your family merely because it offered a possible chance to sell you a tombstone or a crape band for your hat?

You know your neighbors are reliable, that they can be depended on, that they would come to your aid with sympathy or material help should the occasion arise. Then why not show that you appreciate their good qualities by doing business with them regularly and as a matter of habit? They know you and are interested in you. The mail order man is merely interested in getting your money, and that in advance.

SPEND YOUR MONEY WHERE YOU MAKE IT.

Dr. Johnson's Hatred of Americans.

Old Dr. Samuel Johnson if he disliked Scotsmen hated Americans. "I am willing to love all mankind except an American," he said. And Miss Seward, the "Swan of Lichfield," who was present on the occasion, had the temerity to say, "Sir, this is an instance that we are always most violent against those we have injured." "He was irritated still more by this delicate and keen reproach," writes Boswell, "and roared out another tremendous volley, which one might fancy could be heard across the Atlantic."

Benighted.

On a certain southern golf course the sand pits are famous for their difficulty. A New York man played into one of the pits and then cursed, none the less malevolently, if silently, while he took six ineffectual strokes, raising only clouds of sand and fairly burying the ball. Presently he was aware of an interested and incredulous dorky watching him.

"What you see dat snake you's tryin' to kill, man?" he demanded.—New York Post.

DO YOU GROW STRONG?

Great occasions do not make heroes or cowards. They simply unveil them to the eyes of men. Silently and imperceptibly, as we wake or sleep, we grow and wax strong, we grow and wax weak, and at last some crisis shows us what we have become.—Canon Westcott.

CLEAN MILK FROM THE SMALL DAIRIES

Sanitary milk supplies may be furnished by the small dairies as well as by the larger ones by keeping the milk "clean, cool and covered," according to Professor R. R. Graves, head of the Oregon Agricultural college dairy department. Cleaner milk rather than richer milk is the demand of the public. And it is a demand that must be met by the dairyman with a small farm dairy if the market for his product is to continue. The treatment necessary in observing the three part rule is neither troublesome nor expensive, notwithstanding the fact that trouble and expense are urged as reasons against the production of sanitary milk. The quality of the milk may be easily improved without materially increasing the cost of production.

Bacteria, dirt and foul odors are the usual causes of insanitary milk.

The largest number of bacteria found in milk fall into it during the milking. They come from the dust in the air and from particles of dirt, hair and manure. This number can be de-crossed by keeping the cow well cleaned and by wiping the udder and flanks with a moist cloth just previous to milking. No dry feed should be given the dairy cow until after milking, and if the floors are quite dry they should be sprinkled down lightly. Neither should roots or strong vegetables be fed before milking.

The rugged Brown Swiss cattle until recently were subjected to severe criticism from dairy cattle breeders in this country by reason of their departure from established dairy type. They first came here in rugged, not to say rough, form, and with hides that usually lacked much of mellowness. But when one of the breed made above three pounds of butter a day in a public test dairymen began to change their attitude, and today the Brown Swiss cow is highly regarded as a milk and butter producer. The cow shown produced in one year 10,569 pounds of milk and 455 pounds of butter fat.

The personal habits of the milkers must be closely looked after. Absolute cleanliness of clothes and person is indispensable to the milker of sanitary milk. If the clean white suits used in commercial dairies are not available their place may be well supplied by a long, light, loose fitting coat, which is worn during milking and at no other time. The practice some milkers follow of milking the udders with milk is too filthy to be tolerated in any dairy. If the teats and udders have been wiped as suggested they will not need further moisture.

As warm milk rapidly absorbs all odors present, it should be removed from the milking stable immediately after being drawn. It may be cooled by pouring it into cans that are sitting in tubs or tanks partly filled with water as cold as can be had. If possible it should be reduced to 50 degrees or lower, in which case bacterial activity almost ceases. The cooling process is hastened by occasionally stirring both the water and the milk with a clean rod, and it should be completed at least before the end of an hour.

Another source of bacteria in milk is improperly cleaned milk vessels. All pails and cans in which milk is kept should be washed in warm water with a bit of soda or other detergent and then immersed for five minutes in boiling water. Special attention should be given to corners, where decayed milk containing souring and putrefying bacteria is found.

Watch the Lambs.

Sheep more than any other domestic animals require variety in food, says the Farm and Fireside. In the fields they are able to cater for themselves out in the yards they are dependent on their keeper, and it is up to him, if he hopes to make the best possible profit out of them, to see that this desire for variety is as far as possible gratified. After lambing is over a much wider range of feeding is admissible, and, in fact, there is hardly anything in the range of grains, meals, succulents and roughage which may not safely be given to ewes with their lambs so long as they seem to enjoy and fairly clean up what is given them. "Watch the lambs" is the best rule to follow. If they show signs of falling off the source of the trouble is almost sure to be found in something in the feeding or care of the ewes that needs a change. Impure water, foul air, rotten fair, dirty feeding troughs, want of salt, exposure to heavy rains, rough treatment of any kind—any of these evils if continued will greatly help to lessen the hoped for profits.

Clean the Barnyard.

Piles of manure and manure puddles are in very bad form around the dairy barn and look bad for the owner, says the Farm Journal. Manure is too valuable to be allowed to lie in heaps or spread around the yard. It should be spread on the land daily, or be put under shelter. From a sanitary standpoint it should be removed from the buildings. There was a time when a farmyard stench was regarded as healthful, but in our day we have learned better. There is now absolutely no excuse for a filthy hopen.
