Farm and Garden

BETTER FARMHOUSES.

Department of Agriculture Makes a Plea For Economical Buildings.

The importance to the farmer of having an economical farmhouse has been emphasized by the farm architect of the department of agriculture, who states that the mental and physical fitness of the laborers both within the house and in the fields is vitally affected by the building that affords the family shelter. The average American farmhouse has failed to share in the improvements that are every day being made in agricultural conditions and, according to the architect, is a rebuke to our bonsted civilization. Relntively, he says, the housewife of a century ago, with her fireplace cooking and log cabin, was better provided for than is the housewife today.

The most important building on a farm is the home. The health, comfort and happiness of the family are dependent upon its construction and equipment, and unless these matters are looked after the sanitary dairy barn and the economically constructed buildings for stock are of little value. Happiness and contentment in the family are as essential to efficient service as improved tools and outbuildings.

Although the housewife spends, in many cases, a lifetime in her "workshop," the kitchen and the family rooms, she is not, as a rule, capable of planning a house in the highest degree serviceable and comfortable without assistance. Her help, however, is essential to the farm architect, as the result of his plans most vitally concerns

In 1910 a western farm paper, at the suggestion of the department of agri-lis final account as such admiss-culture, conducted a competition for farmhouse plans. About 680 plans of farmhouses were submitted, not one of which was fully satisfactory. The lar-ger number insisted on some particuger number insisted on some particufeature to the neglect of other imporfeature to the neglect of other impor-tant ones. The men and women who jections thereto.

ADELBERT FIELD, familiarize themselves with the work to be done and then apply themselves to the single task of devising means are the ones who, with the co-operation of the farmers and their wives, can best handle the farmhouse problem.

One of the most important details regarding the average American farmhouse is that it must be inexpensive. The average annual net income of a farmer today after deducting 5 per cent interest on his investment is less cent interest on his investment is less than $400. This does not mean that set Monday, the 4th day of May, 1914, the houses may not be attractive. They may, if intelligently planned with the help of vines, shrubs and trees, become the prettiest spots in the land-come the prettiest spots in the land-scape, and more beautiful and inexpensive than the crowded city houses.

After economy in the construction of the building and in the house work has been attained, attention will be given to developing beauty. Simplicity in line and good proportions are meant by the use of this word beauty, and not so called applied "ornaments." This so called applied "ornaments." This In the circuit court of the state of simplicity is entirely in keeping with Oregon for Crook county. a general plan of economy.

Economy, however, is not a synonym for cheapness. Double strength glass may even be more economical in a tenant house than single strength, notwithstanding its greater first cost. A kitchen sink may be a paying investment, although it excludes a bay window, or a fireplace, which has been the pet notion of the housewife. Screened in kitchen porches, sleeping porches double or triple windows and kitchen conveniences are tine economical features which even the smallest house plans may well consider.
