COUSIN TO THE CABBAGE.

Kohirabi Liked by Some Dairymen as Food For Cows.

Kohlrabi is a cultivated variety of the kale or cabbage, distinguished by the swelling of the stem just above the ground, in a globular form, to the size of a man's fist or larger, leafstalks springing from the swollen part and adding to the peculiarity of its appear-This is the part which is used. and its uses are similar to those of the

In quality the kohlrabi more nearly resembles the Swedish than the common turnip, and the use of it for feeding cows does not give their milk as disagreeable a flavor as when they are fed on turnips. Kohlrabi is very hardy, its leaves, as well as the stem and the root, enduring the most severe

In the cultivation of kohlrabi it is usual to sow it on seed beds and to transplant by dibbling into fields, but this is perhaps not the best method. It ought, however, to be sown earlier than even Swedish turnip. Raised drills are unsuitable for it, owing to the effect of winds. It is more solid and nutritious than any kind of turnip of the same size. There are numerous subvariedes. Kohirabi grows best in a strong, rich soll, with the use of abundant manure. One authority says of kohlrabi:

"Sow in spring, in rows eighteen inches apart, afterward thinning the plants to eight to ten inches. If the weather is suitable the thinnings may be planted, but it is considered difficult to transplant. Keep the weeds down, and when the thickened stems above ground are two or three inches through they are fit to eat and should used at once, being tough when old. Cook same as turnins."

* OWN YOUR HOME.

Every young farmer should strive to own a home. The home owner has more opportunity for efficient service to his community, county and state, and the comfort and pleasure of living on one's own farm are not to be compared to renting. Rent if you are not able to buy, but make your plans for owning your home ********************

Why We Cultivate Corn.

The purposes of interculture tillage are, first, to kill weeds; second, to keep the surface soil receptive to rainfall; third, to prevent the evaporation of soil moisture. Cultivating corn four inches deep as compared with two inches deep may reduce the yield 10 per cent, owing to pruning the roots. Four or five cultivations are usually sufficient.-Farm Progress.

A good way to keep off disease is to dig up a portion of the soil where the hens assemble, so that they can scratch and have a dirt bath in the clean fresh

Provide a good open shed for the young turkeys to roost in and don't allow them to wander off. Their value is too great to allow them to take up with the neighbor's flock,

Always make the nest boxes easily removable, so that they may be frequently taken out of the house and cleaned, disinfected and treated for the destruction of vermin.

Ducks and geese do not roost and, when housed with chickens, are obliged to inhale the bad air from the floor under or near the perches. A low shelter and a small yard will make them comfortable.

"P OWERFUL indeed is the empire of habit," wrote Publius Syrus along about the year 1. Habit's the stuff life is made of. You get into the habit of eating three meals a day, of a cold plunge in the morning, of wearing a favorite color, of following the business routine of the office, of talking about the weather, of being a grouch or an optimist. Yes, life is all a habit. A powerful empire, indeed, is habit. Habit automatically solves many of our problems. The habit of forgetting cures anger and sorrow. The habit of saving prevents want and misery. The habit of remembering saves waste and inefficiency.

EFFICIENT shoppers get the habit of following the ads. in this paper closely and intelli-gently. They know just where they can buy what they want at any time at the lowest prices.

INEFFICIENT shoppers, loose of habit, look up the ads. only when they want something on the spur of the moment, or they even fall to do that. They lose, as a person of slovenly habits
